Rev. W. L. Greene spoke on co-operation and fellowship.

Rev. C. F. Parsons congratulated the members in having obtained the services of the new pastor.

FARM ADVISERS SAY "GO SLOW"

American Outlook for 1930 Given in Detail—Young Plan to Help Conditions of All.

Washington.—A policy of conservatism is urged upon American farmers in the coming year in the annual outlook report for 1930 prepared by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in co-operation with representatives of the agricultural colleges and extension services of 45 states and the Federal Farm Board.

Never before has a more careful picture of the whole problem of the farmer been assembled. Immediate and long-time forecasts are given for each of the Nation's staple crops; economic, international and financial considerations are taken up in detail as they affect agriculture and peeps into the future are given as to the probable appearance of the farming community that is ahead.

Farm population has continued to decrease till it is now the lowest in 20 years, the report states. Land values have nearly ceased to decline, it states, and farm mortgage debt appears to have reached its peak and to be starting a gradual recession. Among the broader conclusions in the extensive survey running close to 100 pages, the experts include forecasts of fewer foreclosures, and a decline in farm indebtedness in the next few years; the growth of machinery on the farm; a possible stationary population in the United States within 30 years, and the prospect that "much of the 20,000,000 or 30,000,000 acres of plow land now lying idle in southern and eastern states probably will not be needed for crops during the next few years and perhaps longer."

Of the immediate outlook the report says income from farm products in 1930 probably will not exceed that in 1929; crop yields are likely to be larger than last year; improvement in general conditions may tend to offset lower prices likely to follow increased output.

"With purchasing power of consumers in 1930 somewhat reduced below 1929," the report states, "farmers need to follow a rather conservative production policy. This is a year when it is particularly desirable for each farmer to estimate his probable income in view of the price outlook for each of his products and to plan his production expenditures accordingly.

"Farmers who are planning necessary permanent improvements, such as buildings, fences, ditches or orchards, may find 1930 an opportune time for procuring labor and supplies at somewhat reduced cost."

Specific forecasts are given for wheat and cotton and other crops. Russian wheat experts are uncertain, the report states; world stocks will be somewhat reduced by July 1, tho supply is keeping pace with increased demand. The report warns against overproduction of cotton and states that "more perhaps is to be gained this year than in most years from holding the expense of production in relation to output to the minimum."

The farm population has continued to decrease to the lowest point since 1900, the report states that net migration from country to city seems to have dropped.

Mechanization of the farm is another forecast. Bigger farms, fewer horses and mules, prevalence of all-purpose tractors; these will tend to reduce the labor and the laborers on farms, the report states, and will release still larger acreages of crop and pasture land formerly required for feed for live stock.

Foreign competition in the coming year will probably be somewhat keener than in 1929, despite which foreign demand is likely to be better, particularly in the latter part of the year. The report states that economic conditions are at present somewhat depressed in most of the leading foreign markets of the United States, and cities in Latin-American countries in particular. Easier money conditions in Great Britain will help the far-off Iowan or Nebraskan farmer, while in Germany, second best customer after England, the easing of the international credit situation and suspending of the Young plan will make adoption of the Young plan will materially assist farm families in the United States who never heard of the Young plan.

Erie May Discontinue Belvidere Station

The Erie railroad now discontinue its agency station at Belvidere.

Alleging that the earnings derived are not sufficient to warrent or justify, under present conditions and circumstances, further maintenance of the agency, the Erie has applied to the public service commission for permission to discontinue the station.

Predicts World Peace

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, veteran leader of the long struggle for feminine rights, as she presided over the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War at Washington, predicted the end of all warfare within a century.

WHERE DOES YOUR MILEAGE GO?

In a little house organ which calls itself "Haversticks," which A. R. Baker was kind enough to give the News scribe, we find the following interesting story:

Three hundred and five million dollars was paid by American motorists in 1928 in state gasoline taxes.

That would have bought 1,525,000,000 gallons of gas, enough to give 18,300,000,000 miles of transportation.

Four hundred and fifty million dollars probably will be the figure in 1929 in state gasoline taxes.

That would buy 2,250,000,000 gallons of gas, enough to give 27,000,000,000 miles of transportation.

One billion dollars has been paid during the last ten years in state gasoline taxes. That would have bought 5,000,000,000 gallons of gas, enough to give 60,000,000,000 miles of transportation, or enable you to drive your car around the world 2,400,000 times.

That's where some of your mileage went!

All States Now Are Taxing Gasoline

Ten years ago the maximum tax was one cent per gallon. Today it is six cents.

Legislatures are saying: "Motorists never miss the extra penny or two."

Editors are saying: "Gasoline taxes are becoming unpopular. Too high!"

Is the tax growing out of equitable proportion to the price of gasoline? This sales tax now averages 25 per cent., a levy usually imposed only in times of great emergency.

In some states revenues are being diverted to purposes other than highway construction and maintenance. A good principle is thus becoming unsound, vicious and dangerous!

It borders on class legislation and discrimination against motorists!

How the Aggregate Tax Has Increased

1921	$ 4,700,000
1922	12,100,000
1923	25,300,000
1924	79,700,000
1925	146,100,000
1926	187,600,000
1927	251,800,000
1928	305,000,000
1929 (estimated)	450,000,000

How the Tax Rates Have Increased

Tax	Number of Taxing States 1927	1928	1929

2½ cents	1	1	1

CORTELYOU MARSH INSTANTLY KILLED

Fell From An Oil Derrick From Near Top at Kapps Creek. Lived to Reach Hospital.

One of the saddest accidents to an Andover man that could happen, caused the death of Cortelyou Marsh Saturday night, January 25, when he fell from a 72-foot oil derrick, striking on the derrick floor, near Knapps Creek. He was rushed to the Olean hospital but died soon after.

Mr. Marsh was employed as a tool-dresser and was climbing to the top of the derrick to adjust a sand line when he fell. It is supposed that the icy condition of the rig caused the fall.

LeRoy Brundage of this village, driller, and an assistant, rushed him to the hospital where an examination revealed his neck broken and other serious injuries, from which he died within a short time.

Deceased was a young man highly esteemed by a large circle of friends and by those with whom he was associated in a business capacity. His death caused deep regret and sorrow. He was the grandson of Charles Mix, a former Andover resident.

Besides his parents he is survived by four sisters and two brothers, Mrs. Margaret Fanton, Bolivar; Mrs. Beulah Montgomery, Hornell; Mrs. Rhea Hanchett, Olean, Enolia L.
