500 TAXPAYERS AT FILLMORE MEET

Dr. John Armstrong, Olean Economist, the Speaker. County Politics Shows Its Head.

Fillmore, Aug. 9.—Following a scholarly presentation of the general tax situation as it confronts the individual taxpayer by Dr. John Armstrong, Olean economist, at a meeting of the Allegany County Taxpayers' Association here last evening, a lively interest in the question of tax reduction was manifest by the assembly representing wide areas of the county as well as this township.

Nearly 500 people attended the meeting called by the recently formed non-partisan taxpayers organization. The meeting was the third held by the organization which elected officers at a meeting in Bolivar a week ago.

Dr. Armstrong's analysis of the tax question was both vivid and educational. Demonstrating familiarity with his subject and a keen interest in the problem of securing a reduction of taxes, he gave his audience a clear cut outline of the causes for mounting costs of government and pointed out the only remedy-reduction in expenditures.

"The problem of taxation has within it two inherent interests," said the speaker. "They are, first, the general interest which any taxpayer has in local, state and national taxation; and second, the specific interest of a taxpayer in his particular locality.

"You cannot apply business yardsticks to public finance," he continued in his discussion of the general interest. "In private enterprise the expenditures are governed by the expected amount of revenue or income. In public finance practically the reverse is true," he explained. "The amount of taxes levied is governed by the size of the budget. By reducing the amount of expenditure the amount of revenue is reduced.

"The temptation in government is to set up expenditures, without much consideration of the resulting tax burden. Local, state and national governments have proceeded in this fashion for 35 or 40 years. Today is a day of reckoning—people cannot pay their taxes.

Must Cut Expenses

"The point has been reached where we are taxing everything we can tax. The government is faced with the question of balancing the budget by raising the tax on things already taxed or taxing something new. The other alternative is to lower the expenditure."

Placing the burden of governmental cost squarely on the people, whose constant and continued appeals for appropriations are directly responsible for increasing taxes, the speaker raised the following questions:

"How much do you want the government to do for you? How much do we get for our money? How much can we afford to spend from time to time? How much can we afford to spend for controversial services?"

Charging that the American people have forgotten that they are the government, and have only a vague conception of the source of the money spent by the government, Dr. Armstrong explained that the government earns nothing, but is an agency for spending money.

"The awakening of the people to this situation, augurs well for the future of the country," the speaker averred. He continued by explaining the movement under way to accomplish this end by the New York State Economic Council. This organization is working with units such as the Allegany County Taxpayers' Association to bring about lower government cost.

Dr. Armstrong urged the taxpayers to organize and attack their local situations first but added that eventually state and federal taxes must be reduced.

Following the address by Dr. Armstrong a discussion of the most effective method of securing tax reduction in Allegany county was launched with the suggestion from William E. Tanner, Wellsville attorney, seeking the Republican nination for member of assembly, that the taxpayers' association should endorsa its own candidates.

Discuss Political Party

A sharp division of opinion resulted over the question of taking any political stand. The matter will eventually be thrashed out at a future meeting.

Mr. Tanner pointed out that there are 12 candidates seeking three positions in the primary election next month. Some are supported by one political machine and others by another party, still others running independently. He proposed the endorsement of any of the candidates fitted for office who would work in the interests of the taxpayers or the nomination of a complete slate of candidates outside the ranks of those already in the field.

The strictly non-partisan purpose and character of the association was stressed by those opposed to the plan suggested by Tanner.

Alwin Schaller, Wellsville supervisor, called attention to the purpose of the organization as expressed in its articles of organization as being first, to secure economy in government; second, to reduce public expenditure; third, to search the expenditures of government to discriminate and eliminate waste; fourth, to adequately protect the unemployed; and fifth, to educate the people not to ask for services for which they are unable to pay.

He further explained that it was planned to have local units in as many towns as interest required. The chairmen of these local units will form an executive committee which will map out a programme of procedure and present it to the board of supervisors, with the backing of the county organization.

"As taxpayers there can be no division of interest in this problem," Mr. Schaller stated, "for if anything is gained we are all going to share in the results."

Bolivar Adopts Liquor Law

The village of Bolivar followed the lage of Bolivar, Allegany county oil producing center, has followed the example of its sister community of Franklinville, Cattaraugus county, in local enforcement of prohibition.

Bolivar has adopted a liquor ordinance forbidding the manufacture, sale, transportation or possession of any intoxicating liquors in the village. A penalty of $100 is fixed for violation of the ordinance and it is stipulated that the offender shall be known as a disorderly person. The ordinance took effect on August 1.

Franklinville, said to be the first village in the state to exercise its own power in enforcing prohibition, attracted much attention to itself by success of its ordinance. It practically eliminated the illicit liquor traffic within its borders. Its officials have reported that other villages are showing much interest in the ordinance. They expect it will be adopted in many localities within a short time.

HARVEST HOME DAY THURSDAY, AUG. 18

Prof. John E. Vincent Will Be the Speaker. League Ball Game Between Andover and Scio.

The 56th Annual Harvest Home Day will occur next Thursday, August 18, 1932. The 55 years this great community home-coming day has been the great attraction of this community. The day is held under the auspices of the local Presbyterian church. The committees are now hard at work looking out for all the details of the day, so that you may all be assured of a fine day and successful and happy time.

Especially fortunate are our people that the committee has secured as speaker of the day Prof. John E. Vincent. Mr. Vincent is a recent new resident of Andover, a forceful speaker with rare ability and fine personality. He is sure to bring a message to Andover people of worth and much interest.

One of the very finest things of this life is to meet in social gatherings like the Harvest Home, where we may visit with old friends and make worthwhile new ones. For over a half century Andover people have learned to make good use of this beautiful custom.

The dinner will be served promptly at 12 o'clock and such a chicken dinner as the ladies of the Harvest Home committee alone can serve.

The address by Professor Vincent will be directly after dinner.

Promptly at 3 o'clock the league ball game will start on the Silk Mill diamond. Andover vs. Scio. These two teams are tied for first position in the second section of the schedule of the Decagon Base Ball League and there is surely going to be some scrap to determine which will remain at 1.000 and which falls down a peg.

Arrangements have been made with the management of the Auditorium—too late to get space on the Harvest Home bill—whereby the picture show production will be on a commission basis with the Harvest Home committee. The management having secured a special Harvest Home talking picture show George Arliss in "The Man Who Played God."

Make all your arrangements to come to Andover early in the day and remain till after the picture show in the evening and you will be pleased that you have so done. There is to be something doing all day.

DEPRESSION ENDED IS BELIEF OF MANY

Stock Rise Ascribed to Confidence That Roosevelt Will Be Elected.—Conditions Much Better.

The prevailing opinion is that the current stock market boom and the restoration of business confidence is due to the public's feeling that Roosevelt will be elected President.

As the conviction grows upon the people that Governor Roosevelt is to be elected in November, their confidence is being restored and this developing confidence is manifesting itself in a widespread indication of business improvement.

Observers watch the up-surging stock market, rising commodity prices, return of gold from abroad, and return of currency from hoarding and hopes are high in Washington, but nobody quite dares to throw his hat in the air and cry "The race is won." They have been disappointed too often. But they agree that if the engine isn't yet humming its high prosperity note, it is at least making some initial staccato explosions that are giving the capital and the nation the biggest thrill in years.

Supplies of merchandise and goods are the lowest in years. There is a short interest in the market and once the market really starts up they must buy their way out. There is between $1,500,000,000 and $1,600,000,000 in hoarded money, once confidence is restored that money will surge into the banks and business. There is an enormous credit supply made available by the Reserve system; once business revival starts that supply can be tapped. Gold is returning from Europe, which also increases potential credit.

These are some of the reasons, in addition to rising commodity prices, that make observers increasingly hopeful. They are just as emphatic, however, in declaring that up to the present no improvement has appeared in business on sufficiently large a scale to make itself apparent statistically. If business revival is on its way, it may appear just in time to save the United States from a winter of unparalled hardship.

The new undercurrent of optimism has shown itself in a number of ways. The price of New York Stock Exchange seats has jumped overnight from $90,000 to $130,000. Mr. J. F. O'Keefe, executive secretary of the Chicago Association of Creditmen, has just stated that the merchandising goods on the retailers shelves are in many cases "the lowest in history."

There is a potential demand for new homes of between $300,000,000 and $500,000,000. The backlog of potential automobile replacements is just as big. With all these markets ready and waiting, and indications of returning confidence given on a boiling stock exchange, hopes is higher today than in many months.

Taking the matter of farm commodity prices up specifically, crop prospects in a number of directions are poor, which in this new, topsy-turvy world means that prices will be high and the farmer happy.

The 1932 wheat crop is far below normal even tho the carry-over from last year is big. The cotton crop is also below normal, altho in recent weeks it has filled out. Hogs for the marketing year, which begins October 1st, are about seven per cent. less than last year. Dairy stocks are low, and beef cattle is scarcer. With stocks low, prices ought to stay up. There is a big corn crop, it is true, but this is a blessing if prices of livestock hold up, because cheap corn is turned into expensive pig.

When the history of the deflation is told it may be recorded that it was the livestock industry that led the way out. At any rate, in five weeks hog prices have risen at Chicago from $3.50 to $5.50 per 100; and beef cattle have gained about a third.

One of the things most interesting finance experts here just now is what will happen when the vast sum of hoarded money comes back to the banks. The banks will not need the money, and are expected to pass it on to the Federal Reserve banks, either to pay off debts which they owe there or to cause excess reserves.

In the latter case the banks have an incentive to grant new loans to business so as to use their money profitably. Liberal credit and restored confidence would be the mixture of gasoline and oxygen which make the motor car of revived business move fastest.

RESULT OF DECAGON LEAGUE BALL GAMES

Genesee and Richburg to Have Play-off Saturday at Wellsville to Decide Winner of First Half.

At a meeting of the directors of the Decagon Base Ball League, held at Wellsville, Friday night, it was decided to hold the play-off of the tie between Genesee and Richburg to decide the winner of the first half of the schedule at Tuller Field, Wellsville, Saturday afternoon next. A disinterested umpire has been agreed upon by the directors of the two teams.

Genesee was playing 1000 per cent base ball until they came up against Richburg. A contested game resulted in the game between them at Genesee. The game was played at Wellsville two weeks ago and the result that Richburg won in a 13-inning contest. That gave each team ten wins and one loss. Saturday's game will decide the tie.

Fireworks are anticipated at Wellsville Saturday when the two teams meet again. Regular practices are being held, it is said, by both outfits.

Let the best club win.

The returns from games Sunday in the Decagon League show that the games are tightening up preceptibly as the second half of the schedule advances.

Scio and Alma had a very close game that should be a tie 6 to 6. The game was played at Alma. We understand the game is to be protested. The two umpires not being able to agree on a play.

Robinson Family Reunion

Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Robinson very pleasantly entertained the Robinson family reunion at their new cottage at Williams Camp on Dyke Creek, near Elm Valley, Wednesday, August the 10th.

Altho the day was rainy 40 of the members of the family were present, coming from Buffalo, Genesee, Greenwood, Cuba, Fillmore, Alfred and Bradford, Pa., and with those of Andover completed the company.

They were so well entertained that they unanimously accepted an invitation to meet at the same time for the year 1933.

4-H Club Camps To Open Sunday

The Western New York 4-H Club Camps open for the 1932 season on Sunday, August 14th, with camp enrolled to full capacity. The campers are coming from seven western New York counties which have planned and co-operated in making what should be one of the most successful camps in years.

Ontario county, which for many years has maintained a camp of its own, is sending the largest quota of campers, under the leadership of Arthur Woodard, County Club Agent. Monroe county, which has a separate girls' camp, sends nine boys this year, under the leadership of E. B. Fuller. Livingston county fills its quota by sending six boys under R. B. Ace; Genesee county by sending six campers under M. J. Merton; and Erie county, which is newly organized, is sending five boys under John Walker, former Genesee county agent. Wyoming county is sending six to the camp, including one staff member, Bob Arnold. The remainder of the 60 campers which is the camp's capacity are sent from Allegany county, the home of the Western New York 4-H Club Camp.

The camp opens at the Genesee County Y. M. C. A. camp site at Belvidere on Sunday with the first meal served to the campers Sunday evening.

Howard Shinn, the Y. M. C. A. director, will also direct the activities of the Western New York 4-H Club Camp. He will be ably assisted by Bob Arnold, in charge of games and recreation; Ronald Palmer of Angelica, camp bugler and life saver; Lloyd Robinson of the Alfred "Ag" School, crafts; Mrs. Warner, Ontario county, camp mother; Mrs. Carpenter and Mrs. Moody, county nurses, who will act as camp nurses, and "Uncle Dud" and "Ma" Stearns as camp cooks.

The camp program this year includes courses in swimming, nature study and crafts. In addition, there will be considerable time for recreation and organized games, treasure hunts, etc.

The vesper services play a big part in the camp program, coming at twilight. These, for the most part, will be under the leadership of the campers themselves. A candlelighting ceremony will be participated in by all campers on the last night in camp. Other evenings will be taken up by camp fire programs, etc.

Club boys and girls look forward to the camp for some of the best times of the year.
