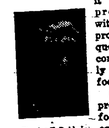
Milk Is Greatest Food Bargain As Prices Of Other Foods Rise

One Quart of Milk Furnishes An Adult With More Than Half A Day's Essential Food Needs

By CHARLES H. BALDWIN
Commissioner, Department of Agriculture and Markets Albany, New York

As the prices of other foods rise, milk tends more and more to become the most economical food to buy. Milk has risen in price during this depression, but it has not risen proportionately with other food products. Consequently, milk becomes increasingly the greatest food bargain.



Charles H. Baldwin

Milk and dairy products are good food buys always, especially because of their superior food value. Milk is the paramount food children must have in order to maintain health and growth. Lack of sufficient milk in the diet of children results in bad teeth and soft bones, due to a deficiency of calcium and phosphorus which milk so abundantly supplies in the form in which they can be assimilated and incorporated into the body directly. Milk also supplies the very necessary food elements of iron and copper.

Food Elements in Milk

Milk and dairy products are the only sources of a peculiarly complete and easily digested form of protein. This particular protein is essential to the growth, health and life of every body cell. It is an essential part of all muscle tissue. A quart of milk a day for every child makes this peculiar and important type of protein economically and attractively available.

Milk is a health protective food because it contains all of these vital food elements and because it creates the alkaline residue and reaction in the blood and tissues of the body that ward off disease. It is protective because it contains some of each of the necessary vitamins which prevent many of what are known as deficiency diseases, such as rickets, certain eye diseases and nervous troubles.

Everybody Likes Milk

In addition, milk is a most delicious and palatable drink, and a substance which, when mixed with other foods, makes them richer, more tempting and nutritious.

FOOD VALUE OF MILK

Scientific tests have shown that one quart of milk furnishes more than half the day's essential food needs for a grownup, as follows:

A full day's amount of Calcium
Sufficient Vitamin A
Sufficient Vitamin G
Some Vitamin B
Important amounts of Vitamin D
Nearly all the Phosphorus
One-eighth of the Iron
One-third of the Protein
One-fifth to one-fourth of the Energy
(depending on the individual)

One half of the day's food supply for the price of a single quart of milk!
