LIBRARY NEWS

What—No Books?

Can you imagine the world today without a book? Extinguish every electric light, silence every telephone and wireless, scrap every airplane and dismantle every radio—even bank the fires under every boiler and yet a miracle would be wrought. We should live on somehow. But destroy every book and the means of producing one and our dazed consciousness would cry aloud to Heaven for quick relief.

Mary Poppins—P. L. Travers

"The story begins like this—If you are looking for number Seventeen, Cherry Tree Lane, and it is more likely that you will be, for this book is all about that particular house—you will very soon find it. Delightful nonsense that defies an age boundary of appreciation. Mary Poppin is a new character—a fresh creation conceived with wit, wisdom and a genuine flare for fun. No parent, teacher or librarian should miss reading the book for the light it sheds on daily association with children and no child should miss his share of the fun, the beauty and the companionableness it holds.

Roundabout American

The Old South, Southwest, and California, by Anne Merriman Peck and Enid Johnson.

A great many of us, if we had the opportunity to travel would think of Europe, but on second thought our country holds the option on beauty, glamour, and romance! Miss Peck describes in this volume the beauty of our United States to the stay-at-home and recalls to the vagabond the picturesque Charleston and New Orleans; the unique Indian civilization and the exotic Chinatown in San Francisco.

Captain Nicholas—Hugh Waysole

This story of Captain Nicholas sinister progress, portrays him as blackmailer, thief, card sharp, scoundrel in general, but of a genteel English descent. Having exhausted his resources on the continent he returned to England to make his home with his sister, Fanny, and her pleasant but old-fashioned family. Of course they were delighted to have the Captain home on a visit. Life become easier so much more interesting until the series of fears drew them all towards an inevitable end.

The Wind Blows West
C. W. Farmenter

Back on an isolated New England farm a man, his wife and daughter catch the Western fever. The man's younger brother, a rover, sends glowing accounts of fortune being wrested from the mountains and a gold nugget for his niece. This nugget stirs the imagination of the family and they abandon the farm and another wagon joins the cavalcade headed West. The delights, the disappointments, the dangers of the long trail, the quest for elusive gold in the shining mountains, and finally the emergence of a new and stable commonwealth founded upon things more enduring than gold.

GRANGE NEWS

H. S. Thorne, Subordinate Lecturer
Eleanor Northrup, Juvenile Lecturer

Wednesday evening a goodly number of Grangers and their friends enjoyed the Juvenile and Subordinate Granges joint program which was rendered practically as printed in last week's News.

There was not so much fun and frolic as in the "Milk" program of the previous meeting. The high tenor of recitations and songs was enhanced and emphasized by the play "Mother and Son," presented by the Friendly Class. The moral integrity and the spirit of worship in the home depicted in the play will live long in the hearts of the children as well as the older ones.

Principal G. E. Bretch's talk "The School's Direct Contribution to Good Citizenship" was very timely as well as instructive to all. He showed how the present emphasis in history was for peace instead of war. In high school American history did not teach events as such, but events as they affected every phase of the life of the nation. The courses in civil government were now called social and economic sciences with the same emphasis in the history. Every child in the high school is required to take this course before graduating.

The Subordinate Grange is entering the new G. L. F. contest. Each family is asked to buy one package of one of the new products, "Milk-oats," "Milkorno," or "Milk Wheato." Get your identification card and have it marked by Victor Perkins and help the Grange win a prize.

The Juvenile Grange in order to stimulate interest in the dairy industry scrap book contest is offering some prizes to the grades of the high school for the best book cover. The eight grades to be grouped as follows: First and second, third and fourth, fifth and sixth, seventh and eighth. Three prizes, 25c, 15c, 10 to each group, but the second prize must be given to the grade not winning the first.

Around Our House

BOOKS ADD TO A HOME

Only when books are owned, read and loved do they really belong to the house, says the New York State college of home economics.

Books should not be kept behind locked glass doors in the room, but some should be in every room. Homemakers will not become weary with the daily routine if they keep books in the kitchen and read them during spare moments. Children's books should also be handy so that mother may read to them occasionally.

In the dining room particularly, a book or two stimulates table conversation, and detracts from attention usually given to the day's troubles. Conversation affects digestion and a meal should become something more than the sharing of food. A dictionary should also have a place in the dining room, so that when a question of pronunciation or spelling arises, one child may have the honor of looking it up.

The habit of reading is as necessary for mental health as fresh air and sunshine are for bodily health, and books can be had in every community if women realize the need for them. At present only three counties in New York state have county libraries.

Leningrad's public library contains almost 5,000,000 books.

Minister Gets Thriller When "Taken for Ride"

Rev. Harold Wass, pastor of the Fillmore and Hume M. E. churches recounted this week an experience recently befalling him which he claims sent paroxysms of fearful emotion pulsating up and down his spine as they seldom have during his whole life.

On one of his late evening walks Friday between Hume and Fillmore, he was overtaken by a lone autoist who pulled to the side of the road and offered him a lift. Taking his place beside the driver he was amazed to gaze in the dim light upon a horrible blood-spotched specimen of humanity, ugly countenance and generally repulsive. Riding in evident agony, believing his life to be in imminent danger, to Fillmore, the driver finally informed the reverand that he had neglected to tell him that he had just enacted a part in a home talent play at Centerville and had failed to remove his make-up which provided for him one of the evil looking characters of the evening.—Fillmore Observer.

RANGE OF NEW DISEASE WIDE

Potatoes Injured from Vermont to Minnesota by Clover Leaf Hopper.

During the past year scientists at Cornell have tried to discover what insect spreads the yellow dwarf disease of potatoes which has caused damage from Vermont to Minnesota. All the common insects were arrested, tried, and acquitted, but the guilty insect was finally found to be the clover leaf hopper which is usually hard to see in potato fields.

Visitors to Cornell's 28th annual farm and home week were thus informed by L. M. Black, research assistant in plant pathology at the college of agriculture.

The leaf hopper may be found, he continued, thruout eastern United States and Canada, and as far west as Arizona and Utah. Because of the range of the insect is greater than the disease, Mr. Black expressed the opinion that the yellow dwarf disease may become more serious.

The leaf hoppers enter potato fields when the sprouts are cracking the ground and remain thruout the season. They may carry the disease virus at any time. When new infections begin to show in early August, he added, they are apt to be most common around the edge of the potato field, especially if the field is bordered by clover. This suggests that isolation of seed plots by planting them in clover fields may not be a desirable practice.

What's the secret? The cost of electricity is down.

Whether you use much or little, you're getting more electricity for your money than ever before. And at twice the price, electricity would still be the biggest bargain you buy today. You can afford to use it freely

HOW, WHAT and WHY?

The Andover News has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Vary Measurements

H. G. H., Richmond Hill, writes: "In all recipes, unless stated otherwise, I believe measurements are level and should be measured exactly.

"Would it make any difference if the quantities were increased or decreased slightly? How great must this variation be to make a difference in the result?"

Professor Marion C. Pfund of the college of home economics replies: "In all modern recipes measurements are supposed to be level and exact. With flour it is understood that the flour is sifted once, spooned into the cup and not shaken and leveled off with a knife.

"A varying product results if quantities called for are increased or decreased slightly, but the difference varies considerably with the nature of the product such as biscuits, cake, and pastry, and with the nature of the materials used such as baking powder, flour and milk. A slight increase of milk in baking powder biscuits, for instance, might produce a biscuit of poor shape and volume, whereas a slight increase in flour would make a dry product.

"A slight increase of the flour in cake, however, would not be so noticeable because of the presence of so much fat, sugar, and milk. A considerable variation of fat in pastry is possible without any particularly unfavorable effect on the product. In other words each particular problem must be determined by itself."

E. P. C., Candor, writes: "My horse has been having trouble with his feet. How may they be tough ened or conditioned?"

Professor M. W. Harper of the department of animal husbandry replies: "The best you can do to condition the horse's feet is to stable him on earth floors. Concrete, brick or wooden floors are very hard for brittle, shelly hoofs.

"It would be a good plan to oil the hoof with neat-foot oil. Paint it on with a brush. This serves to exclude the water and to toughen the hoof."
