Food Stamps

STARTED on a modest scale in Rochester, N. Y., in 1938, the government's "food stamp" plan has grown in popularity by leaps and bounds. As a result, it has been one of the fastest growing relief-surplus remedies and bids well to be the most successful. Inclusion of metropolitan New York in the plan recently took it definitely out of the experimental stage, and by next June it is expected to be in force in practically every large city in the country. By that time it is expected to be disposing of $10,000,000 worth of food a month, with some 5,000,000 beneficiaries participating.

In order not to disrupt the established retail grocery trade of a community, the local groceries are used for distributing the surplus food commodities under the plan as follows:

Persons on Government relief receive in their relief payments each week, in lieu of cash, $1 in the form of orange stamps for each member of the family. These orange stamps are good for the purchase of any foodstuffs the recipients may require or desire. They also receive free with every orange stamp a blue stamp worth 50 cents in trade. The blue stamps, however, are only good for foodstuffs currently designated by the Government as "surplus" commodities. The Government redeems the stamps from the local grocer in cash. A relief family of four would, under the stamp plan, receive $4.00 in orange stamps, good for the purchase of any foodstuffs and also $2.00 in blue stamps for which they might purchase any of the foodstuffs on the surplus list.

The plan thus has a two-fold purpose: First, a relief measure aimed at raising the dietary standards of those receiving federal aid and second, one of several remedies for the surplus farm commodity problem.

The New "Highway Post Office"

THE first rural free delivery service of mail was in 1895 and those were horse and wagon days. A very few years thereafter, rural free delivery service was a common thing in Allegany county, and began to supplant many rural post offices. Rural delivery grew slowly because good roads were few and far between in those days.

Today a new and efficient mail service is in operation between Washington, D. C., and Harrisonburg, Va., a distance of 140 miles. In the pomp and ceremony of launching the system the U. S. Post Office Department hailed the "Highway Post Office" as a companion-piece of the railway mail service. The first Highway Post Office consists of a specially equipped motor bus in which messengers perform the same services in sorting and delivering mail as the railway mail service. The experiment will be supplemented by other routes designed to test its success and it may be that some of our communities served by motor trucks carrying mail sorted in city post offices, and dropped off at local post offices will sooner or later receive the benefits of the new mail service, called the greatest advance since the introduction of the "RFD."

It's discouraging to put as much care and attention on your automobile as you do on your children and then find at the end of five years that you can cash it in for only $50.

A Splendid Speech

THERE'S no question in the minds of the listening public that President Roosevelt possesses an effective and striking command of the English language. The splendid speech given by him last Saturday evening performed a vital service. The sudden stiffening of Yugoslavia's attitude just when it was ready to succumb to the pressure of the Axis is noted. Today President Roosevelt isn't talking about helping but about winning. There is evidence that timidity and defeatism are on the wane and new courage and confidence is shown among the democracies. We Americans have a right to feel honored in giving new courage and new confidence to the unbeaten defenders of Britain. We as Americans should feel glad also that our President declared that America will "stay in" not only until victory for the free nations, but will play its part in the world reconstruction.

Human Nature Does Not Alter

LOOKING over our long past, written by historians of many periods and races, we find that some patterns emerge and form precedents which are worth considering when trying to predict the future —keeping in mind the old saying that history never exactly repeats itself.

For example, altho revolutions might be considered as among the most violent and unreasoning episodes in history, they bear a remarkable resemblance to one another in the course which they almost invariably take. There is a remarkable resemblance between post war periods in economics manners and morals. We think today largely in terms of things, but the abiding thing is human nature. Our life now—our mass production, steam, electricity and oil; banking facilities and all the rest—is new, yet everything in the years following the peace in 1783 after the American Revolution when life was wholly different, was almost identical with the years following 1919.

Amidst the tempestuous waves of the present world storm has history anything to say to us? A little over a hundred years back, during the Napoleonic era Europe was convulsed by an ambitious man whose aim was to be a world dictator and the United States was deeply involved.

The America of the 1780's was as different almost from that of the 1920's as was the Roman Empire, yet we went thru precisely the same course of post-war events. It was, as always, not things but human nature that counted in the long run. Obviously in the space of an article, we cannot recite in detail but Napoleon, like Hitler, had his victories—one enemy after another—excepting Britian could not be broken down. He too, as Hitler, is learning the lesson that in spite of control of the continent if you cannot control or have free access to the oceans and the world trade routes you cannot remain master of your conquests. At the height of Napoleon's power, men who believed in freedom had the same intense terror and hatred aroused by Hitler today. Terror for the present, hopelessness for the future. Yet Napoleon fell and therein lies the lesson for our own day.

Human nature does not greatly alter, altho emotions can be whipped up to a plane of war psychology. The time comes, as Joseph C. Harsch, a Berlin correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor, who is now in the United States, relates in his articles "Inside the War" that the German people and inhabitants in conquered areas long for the pleasures of peace, home, business, safety, quiet simple happiness of everyday living.

Let us not be deceived into either undue pessimism or optimism. With all Hitler's ability neither he nor Mussolini is a Napoleon. Things for a while count heavily, but man and not things count most. With our resources we can give of our supplies from every source and arrest and control this fateful crisis for the common and free man everywhere and the civilization of the future.

Most ugliness is unnecessary, because it is an expression of disorder, uncleanliness, and shiftlessness, all of which can be corrected.

Of the 1,904,000,000 acres of land in continental U. S., the 1940 Census reported 1,060,507,355 in farms. Crops were harvested from 321,757,900 acres.
