County Offering Sheep Dipping Service

The Allegany County Farm Bureau is offering the service of sheep dipping again this year, according to Carlos Cary, Assistant County Agricultural agent. It is expected that this service will be conducted sometime during June.

Over 3,000 sheep and lambs were dipped in 1940 for the control of ticks and lice. Many shepherds dipped their flocks to improve the quality of the wool.

The dipping service is carried out by means of a portable outfit borrowed from Livingston County. It consists of a vat with a holding pen on front and a drain pen on back, mounted on a four wheel trailer drawn by a truck. It also carries two ramps for getting the sheep up and down.

Any sheep grower who is interested in having his flock dipped should notify the Farm Bureau Office, Belmont, immediately, according to Mr. Cary. The cost of this service will be only enough to cover the cost of materials and labor. It is expected that a charge of six cents per head with a $2.00 per flock minimum will be made.

Spring feeds used to put a horse in working condition are any of the common farm grains and good hay. Oats and corn are the grains most commonly used.
