Every dog must wear a tag of the current dog license year. A dog without such a tag is not protected by law and no action can be maintained for loss injury or destruction.

An unlicensed dog may be seized and killed and the fact that a dog is without a tag is presumptive evidence that the dog is unlicensed.

Pvt. Victor Yannie Writes About Army Life and Morale

Tells of the Soldiers' Reactions to the Pearl Harbor Attack. Likes Army Life.

"Somewhere In the U. S. A."

Dear Clair:

It has been rather a drab Christmas season for me this year, but the cards and remembrances I have received seem to have inspired me sufficiently to write a few lines and thank all who took "time out" to think of me.

I am now attending the Ordnance School at Aberdeen Proving Ground Maryland. I expect to return to Ft. Benning at the completion of my course about Feb. 1 or sooner.

Some of the people may have wondered how the boys reacted to the news of Dec. 7. I couldn't see any difference except that the first thing they said was "There goes our Xmas furloughs." That was the extent of our worries.

We feel that it is like having an ulcerated tooth that has been swollen and finally bursts. We are relieved even tho we know it's going to hurt to have it pulled.

I don't think the morale could be any better than it is at present. There was a time when the boys didn't know what the score was and felt pretty low, but now everyone is in earnest and no one "kicks" about having to do a certain job. We all get along fine together and help each other when the need arises. Constantly being together and traveling together makes for closer companionship. If a buddy has a dance date and needs a laundered shirt, because his is in the laundry, he borrows one from a friend and vice versa. One reason I mention this is because of what happened to me the other day. I asked to borrow an electric flatiron from a fellow to press a pair of trousers and he flatly refused. I laughed and walked away. Later a pal told me he had been in the army about a month. That was the only explanation I needed.

I really felt sorry for that fellow because little incidents like that make the difference between a downhill haul and a continuous struggle.

This past year has been one that I shall always remember, not entirely because of the thrilling experiences I've had nor the practical knowledge I've gained but events have happened lately that make me feel that every hour I've spent on maneuvers has a double value now. No doubt the time will come when those experiences will become a reality. No longer do dive bombers have a paralyzing effect on us as they did at first. We all know what to do in such a case, and are trained to become efficient for our good and for the good of everyone else.

We wash our clothes in creeks, stir our clothing when it needs sewing and we sleep wherever we happen to bivouac. If we have been drilling all night in a blackout we don't find it difficult to sleep in the daytime, that is, if there are no tanks or other vehicles to be repaired at once.

We learn how it feels to leave a comparatively warm bed at 4 o'clock in the morning, form a combat unit fight all day without food or water because the combat outfits are forming a new defense line and we must keep the maintenance outfits intact. At that time all these things seemed to be exaggerated, but they were very necessary. It's some consolation to know we are able to take this kind of thing without ill effects. I think the rest of the fellows feel as I do about this.

When a soldier has been on maneuvers for about four months, he feels he has earned every cent he gets. When he goes to town he resents being charged double or triple for things just because he is a soldier. Stores and taxis have done this very thing in the maneauver area. The army officers stopped a lot of it. As a rule the people treated us O. K. They were anxious to talk with us, and we found it interesting to get their viewpoints on different subjects. Many people thought that every soldier was a rogue, but I'm sure now they feel quite secure in spite of their convictions.

No doubt this is old stuff to you, Claire, but I know the folks back home like to know how we fellows get along. I think it's swell of you to print the letters the boys write to you. No matter how far from home we are, the "News" seems to keep us closer together. I don't know where I'll be when I write you again, but until then good luck!

Sincerely,

PVT. VICTOR YANNIE,
Fort Benning, Ga 4

Congratulations To Baker's Hardware

Local Hardware Firm Completes Thirty-five Years of Successful Business in Andover.

The News is pleased to congratulate Baker's Hardware today, January 15th, on its 35th anniversary as a prosperous and flourishing Andover business concern.

January 15, 1907, the keys to the Andover Hardware Store were handover over to its new owners, E. D. and A. R. Baker, by its former owner, P. C. Lynch and since that time the Baker Hardware has been an active spot in Andover's business section.

For nearly 20 years the store occupied the two Atwood stores on Main street, the one now occupied by Wade's Restaurant and the vacant one beside it. The hardware store occupied both floors and the basement of these two stores. As this business grew, especially in the farm machinery department, more room was needed and in December, 1909, they purchased the lot on Greenwood street and erected a store house, which after retiring from the machinery business in 1926 they remodeled into a store, and moved from the Atwood block on Main street into their present location in July 1926.

E. D. Baker retired from the business because of health conditions July 1, 1933, and the business has since been conducted under the direction of A. R. Baker.

Thirty-five years of active, prosperous business speaks for itself of its efficient business management and service to the public.

One good thing about the shortage of automobiles is that 1942 will have less traffic deaths.
