W. W. Miller returned to Andover Saturday and will probably remain through the summer. He has just completed a transfer of his lumber plant in the south to a Chicago wholesale lumber firm, and a stock company now being formed which will be incorporated under the laws of Louisiana. Mr. Miller will hold a large portion of the stock. The offices of the company will be in Chicago. The property transferred by Mr. Miller includes 6,000 acres of long-leaf yellow pine timber land, a mill with a capacity of 50,000 feet of lumber per day, and a railroad four miles long running from the mill into the forest. The mill is situated 55 miles north of New Orleans, on the main line of the Illinois Central railway. The property is exceedingly valuable, and the business will be conducted on a very extensive scale.

Many people who do not now favor village ownership of water works would do so if they could be assured that the people of the village would use the water for domestic purposes, thus creating a revenue for paying the bonds. They are afraid the money to pay the bonds would have to be raised by direct taxation. We would respectfully ask if these gentlemen can name a town where there is a system of water works, where the people do not use the water for domestic purposes? The history of any movement of this kind will show that in from two to four years the use of water becomes as general as is the use of gas in Andover at the present time. But suppose for the sake of argument that the sum of, say $500 a year must be raised by tax toward paying off the bonds. Cannot the people of this place better afford to pay such a sum for this purpose than to pay the same amount to a private company for the use of water for fire protection? If this money is used to pay bonds, each payment made will reduce the principal, and finally the whole amount will be paid, the village then owning the plant. If the money is paid to a private company there will never be an end to the payments, and the village will never own a penny's interest in the plant. But in regard to the people using water—there is abundant capital ready to put in the plant, if they can get the franchise, and the men who have this capital are willing to take the chances of selling the water. There is every reason to believe that the bonds would be paid without a penny's tax upon property.

A new time table went into effect on the Erie last Sunday. Several new trains were put on.
