A socialist, in replying to Dr. Rainsford's church saloon scheme, said, among other things, that it would simply be the rich men of the city giving the poor man a better saloon than he now had to spond his wages and to become a slave to his appetites. First care for his intellect and morals and then a man will lect and morals, and then a man will find other things to do than to spend money on cards and liquors.

America had in 1890 2,700,000 America had in 1890 2,700,000 bread-winning women and girls working outside of their own homes. There were 110 lawyers, 165 ministers, 320 authors, 588 journalists, 2,061 artists, 2,136 architects, chemists, pharmacists, 2,106 stock-raisers and ranchers, 5,135 government clerks, 2,438 physicians and surgeons, 13,132 professional musicians, 56,800 farmers and planters, 21,071 clerks and bookkeepers, 14,465 heads of commercial houses, 155,000 public school teachers (based on the census of 1880.)

One of the finest tributes ever paid to our organization was that of Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson's at the mass meeting of the W. C. T. U. Sunday afternoon in connection with the Woman's Congress. It was this: "That the Woman's Christian Temperance Union sits today, scentered and ance Union sits today, sceptered and throned and crowned at the centre of the world's encircling organiza-tions of women, is not so much be-cause its battle is against the foe of childhood and motherhood and the home; not because its grand crusade is one of rescue to lost manhood; not because of its hundreds of thousands in numbers, or the multiplied agen cies of its numerous departments of human helpfulness, as it is because it has struck this one chord to which the hearts of women answer. It made a Union. That was great. It made a Temperance union. That was greater. It made a Woman's Temperance Union, and that was greatest. But it made a Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and that, and that alone, made greatness in any degree possible to all the rest that, and that alone, made greatness in any degree possible to all the rest. Nay, I dare go even further (loyal subject though I am, not unmindful of the royal presence): I venture to say that not even such masterly and magnificent leadership as this white ribbon army has known, could have born its victorious banner to the gate of every welcoming nation, or have born its victorious banner to the gate of every welcoming nation, or have lifted the towers of you fair Temple to the sky, had not the hearts of the women of the world been already the temples of the living God. It was the voice of Christ that called together the white-haired and white-souled women of that first crusade, and it is the Christ in the union, the Christ in the woman that has been, in all this movement, the secret and in all this movement, the secret and source of its success and power."
