How Much Would You Buy?

AN AMERICAN sailor, from the cruiser Vincennes which was sunk, tells of his escape: "I jumped about 13 to 15 feet into the water. Most of the men in the water were calm. Some had no life jackets. They hung on to those who had them. The water was warm at first but got chilly toward morning."

How many War Bonds would you buy to avoid that experience? How much would it be worth to you not to take the chances those sailors took, several men afloat on a preserver made for only one? And, in the dark, without knowing if a ship would ever pick you up?

When you buy War Bonds, you give nothing. You will get all your money back, with interest. So, the question should be, how much money will you loan, in gratitude that you won't be asked to pass thru such an experience?

Non-Aggression 1500 B. C.

ACCORDING to the archeologists, the world's first recorded two-power pact was recently unearthed on the Turkish-Syrian frontier in the form of clay tablets bearing cuneiform writing of 1500 to 1300 B. C.

According to the tablets, the Mitannis made a pact with the Egyptians and the Hittites, providing for non-aggression and mutual aid in case of attack.

Apparently, the nations of that era found non-aggression pacts as worthless as nations of the 20th century. We do not know how well the mutual aid provision worked, but the presumption is that it did not amount to much.

In the present day, as in ancient times, the existence of nations depends, not upon agreements to outlaw aggression and war, but in the power and resolution of the nation in its own defense.

We do not know what lessons will come from the present world struggle, but, regardless of what happens, the people of the United States will undoubtedly understand that the safety of this republic in the future depends upon the armed forces that we maintain and our willingness to use them against our enemies.

Lest we forget and lest you forget: Be sure to shop early for Christmas. This is good advise for you and will help avoid the usual rush.

"Much Good Time"

THE flash of 42nd Street. Sloppy Joe's, the Gaiety, the Astor Bar, Radio City, Times Square. The playground for several million New Yorkers—sophisticated New Yorkers, they're called. At their finger tips are the most expensive night clubs, the hottest swing bands and the newest in movie and theatre entertainment. Here is access to what cosmopolites term a "good time."

Are these superficial amusements the true key to enjoyment? Need entertainment be so complex? Naivete is a lost quality in the swiftly-moving 20th century.

There is a lesson to be learned in the following tale reprinted from Titmus Tidings and perhaps we who are living in this era should read it thoughtfully:

An Indian lecturer, Charles Eagle Plume, tells of an old Indian who was entertained in one of our large cities. He was taken to the best night clubs, heard the swing bands, and was shown how white men have their fun. He sat thru a number of movies, and was feverishly rushed from place to place and given a taste of modern life in all its phases.

When the entertaining was finished, the old Indian was asked what he thought of it. "Ugh," he grunted, "white man must be unhappy—work so hard to have good time—no have good time at all. Indian, he sit on rock and watch sun go down every night. Much good time. Moonlight on rippling water—much good time. Watch fire burning low—much good time. Hear pine trees whispering together on hilltop—much good time. Very still stars, like heap and heap candles in heaven—much good time."

Tubeless Tires

A FEW months ago rubber manufacturers began turning out tubeless automobile tires. The public was skeptical but tests of these tires on the highways created wide interest.

Now the Petroleum Industry Board and the War Council are beginning to encourage inventors of tubeless tires. The big rubber companies are making them, and some companies are showing in advertising that tubes are as unnecessary as "the fifth wheel to a wagon." Firms like Goodrich go clear out on the end of the limb in making the assertion that tubeless tires are being made to meet all requirements.

Getting Along Somehow

TWENTY years ago the production of automobiles was around 340,000, which just about equals the number of new cars for 1942—and we got along somehow. There are 1,300,000 miles of surfaced highways in the United States, whereas the U. S. Bureau of Roads classified only 662,000 miles, or about 20 per cent as "improved" in 1917—and we got along somehow.

We'll have to continue to "get along somehow" under war conditions governing automobiles, rubber, gas and other things we are accustomed to.

We have seldom met a man who didn't have the solution to one or more of the nation's pressing problems.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE CHURCH AND THE SOCIAL ORDER

International Sunday School Lesson for December 13, 1942.

Golden Text: "Ye are the salt of the earth. — Yea are the light of the world."—Matthew 5: 13-14.

Lesson Text: Mathew 5: 13-16; Mark 12: 13-17; 1 Peter 2: 13-17

In our discussion of the lesson for last week, we called attention to the comparisons which Jesus used in connection with his followers. A repetition is not amiss. Surely, Christians should have it impressed on their hearts and minds that they do owe something to their community and have a responsibility as followers of Jesus Christ to make their contribution felt in the uplifting and improvement of the moral tone of the place in which they live.

Salt was as necessary in the time of Jesus as it is today. In those days, when artifical refrigeration was unknown, salt was a very necessary element in the preservation of foods, especially meats. Salt was used in sacrifice by the Jews, Greeks and Romans, and was an emblem of purity and of the influence of a holy life upon others. Salt saves from corruption, and, by the use of this comparison, Jesus was and is reminding his disciples that it is their duty to keep others from moral corruption.

However, we are also reminded that there may come a time when, if unduly exposed, salt can lose its value—its savor — and then it becomes worthless, only fit to be cast out and trodden under the feet of men. The warning here is that Christians, the salt of the earth, the saving element in a corrupt environment, must always endeavor to keep themselves "unspotted from the world" in order that they may not lose their helpful influence. "Be ye separate," we are commanded. This does not mean that Christians should cloister themselves, away from the teeming multitudes that need their helpful ministry, but that, in the world, they should exert a saving influence.

Christians are also compared to a light — something that brings brightness into dark places. What kind of a light are you?. If we could remember always that God is the source of all power and that, through prayer, we can link up our lives with that great powerhouse. I wonder if we would be such weak lights for Him. Isn't it tragic that we display such dim lights to the world, when there's so much power to be had only for the asking?

What is the duty of the church toward the state? Certainly, all thoughtful people agree that it is right and proper that the two be divided, but has the church any responsibility toward the state, and v.ce versa? Jesus taught that his followers had social as well as spiritual responsibilities. He recognized the obligations due government. The real Christian accepts and fulfills his responsibilities to the state. These responsibilities involve, among other things, his obedience to the laws of his government, payment of taxes required for the support of its functions paticipation in elections in order that proper persons might be placed in position to exercise authority over others and to do all things which might be required of a good citizen.

The church, through its pulpit and through its leaders, has a duty to perform in educating and urging its members to take their rightful place in the state. This great nation of ours has great need of Christian statesmen and less need of grasping politicians. Men and women, actuated by Christian principles, should not hesitate to sacrifice personal preferences but should offer their services to their country. As Charles E. Jefferson declared: "It is because Chrictian citizens have in large numbers neglected their political duties that political scandals have been so appalling. If good men refuse to vote, bad men will be on hand. If elders and deacons refuse to run for office, the word heelers will dominate the political world. Our citizenship is rooted in heaven; therefore we must be sure to vote. If politics are dirty, why not do our part in making them clean? This same principal applies to all our duties and privileges as citizens.

Farmers May Obtain Temporary Gas Certificates

Farmers who have filed applications for certificates of necessity to obtain gasoline for farm trucks, but who have not yet received their certificates, or who have received a certificate, which owing to clerical or other obvious errors provides for less gasoline than the operator should have, can obtain a temporary ration sufficient to operate through December 31. Likewise, farmers who did not receive a sufficient gasoline ration can appeal through their county agricultural agent or county war board.

This announcement was made today by S. W. Clarke of Andover, N. Y., R. 2., who is a Director of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association.

He disclosed that the Dairymen's League carried the complaint of farmers, many of whom were not granted sufficient gasoline on their certificates of necessity to enable them to carry on their business, direct to the Office of Defense Transportation and WPB. League officials had two conference with government regional representatives in New York and one in Washington. In addition at the League's Board of Directors' meeting in New York, November 24, a committee was appointed to present the farmers' problem to William J. Clark, regional director of the Motor Transport Division of ODT. Membes of that committee were John E. O'Brien, Middletown; Glen E. Mead, Montrose, Pa., and James P. Candon, Pittsford, Vermont. They told the government official that in some instances farmers had been allowed only 15 gallons of gasoline. They pointed out that farmers use their trucks in various kinds of work on the farm as well as to move produce to market and to haul back supplies.

"It was pointed out," said Mr. Clarke, "that ODT regulations threatened to interfere with the ability of farmers to increase food production as the government has requested."

The day following the League directors' interview with the ODT representatives, word was received from Washington by the League that temporary rations to keep farm trucks rolling until the end of the year would be granted where certificates had not yet been issued or were in obvious error. ODT pointed out that many farmers' applications contained insufficient information to enable ODT to determine how much gasoline were required. In such cases the Washington report said, "small amounts of gasoline were allowed" to "tide them over" pending receipt of full information.

Com. of Agriculture Makes Statement Regarding Milk

There have been so many alarmist reports about the milk supply in recent weeks I believe our citizens kill be interested to know the real situation as it exists here.

We are the second largest milk producing state. There is no shortage of milk here. I find nothing in our production figures to warrant the belief there will be a shortage.

For the past ten months, New York dairymen have produced approximately five per cent more milk than in the same period of 1941, which was a record production year. In October, the last month for which statistics are available, the metropolitan market had a surplus above fluid milk and cream use of 30 per cent. This margin may be less in November which is our lowest production month. But from now on, production always increases.

There can be genuine satisfaction that our dairymen, with traditional patriotism and under great handicaps, are providing ample milk sufficient for our own fluid needs plus a surplus sufficient to help feed our armed forces and our allies.

For some time, part of this surplus has gone to military camps along the eastern seaboard as far as Florida. Part of it also goes into processed products to be shipped overseas for the use of our allies. Both needs may increase. They could, of course, reach a point where they might cut or normal fluid supply. Should this occur, I am confident our citizens will gladly share their own fluid supply to whatever extent may be necessary as a willing contribution to the war effort.

Farm Truck Owners Can Appeal for Change in Certificate of War Necessity

Only farmers whose certificates of war necessity does not provide for sufficient mileage for the operation of his truck for necessary farm operations can file an appeal immediately thru the county farm Bureau Office, Belmont, N. Y., according to Roy Breadon, chairman of the committee. Forms on which to file the appeal are available at the Farm Bureau Office, or can be obtained from members of the committee or Farm Bureau committeemen.

Local Rationing Boards can issue a supplementary allocation of gasoline to take care of a farmer's needs thru Jan. 31, 1943, until the ODT can act upon the farmer's appeal.

Members of the County Farm Transportation committee in addition to Mr. Breadon are: C. F. Hober, Belmont; Wallace Wingert, Caneadea; Clair Brooks, Scio and Ferd Shear, Wellsville.
