A Mystery

Wife (to policeman) "Oh, sir, my husband has disappeared. I've looked everywhere for him. He's been gone two days. Here's his picture—I'm very anxious to locate him."

Policeman (scrutinizing photograph) — "Why?"

Manager (about to give a clerk a lecture.) 'Mr. Jones, of late your work has been perfunctory."

Clerk. "I've been working here for three months now, sir, and though I've tried my best, that's the first bit of praise I have received since I came. Thank you sir."

"Isn't your son rather young to join the Army?"

"Yes, but you see he's only in the infantry."

Farm Machinery Repair

By B. A. JENNINGS
Professor of Agricultural Engineering at Cornell University

Even though rationing and distribution controls over new units of farm machinery have been removed, the New York State Emergency Food Commission emphasizes that farmers must continue to rely chiefly on their existing equipment in 1945. Under the War Production Board schedule for the manufacture of disc harrows this year, only about one of every 600 farms in the country will be able to have a new one. Thus, the safest thing to do is repair your old one.

For good operation, the disc harrow requires more careful and thorough lubrication than any other farm implement. Here are some important points:

1. All discs should be tight on the axle or shaft — loose ones result in wear on the gang bolt or shaft. Tighten the gang nut securely and reset the lock.

2. Take apart and clean the bearings. If they are worn badly it is well to replace them with new inserts — wooden or metal ones depending upon the machine.

3. Clean oil fittings and fill with fresh grease.

4. Adjust scrapers so they will scrape mud and dirt from the discs and prevent them from plugging up.

5. For most efficient operation keep discs sharp and lubricate them thoroughly.

6. Tighten all loose bolts in the frame and weld any broken members.

There is almost no reason for discarding a spring-tooth harrow. With good care, and frequent overhaul a spring-tooth harrow will last a long time. Check these points:

1. Replace worn shoes — neglect in repairing or replacing a worn shoe puts many a good harrow on the junk pile before its usefulness is over. Shoes can be made by your blacksmith or in your own shop.

2. Reinforce any worn parts of the frame by welding or bolting a piece of angle-iron on the inside of the frame.

3. Bent, sprung, or badly worn teeth should be replaced.

4. Adjust the teeth so that all are set at the same depth. This job should be done on a level floor.

5. Clamped on or bolted points can be reversed if they are worn or dulled.

6. Inspect and repair depth levers and bars so they work correctly and easily.

7. In the field the hitch should be adjusted so all teeth work equally.
