Erie Railroad Adds New 4,000 H. P. Diesel Engine

When the Erie Limited (train No 1) westbound passed through Andover on Tuesday, June 26th, it was powered by a 4,000 housepower Baldwin - Westinghouse streamlined diesel locomotive.

Operating on the train's regular schedule the two-unit bluecream and red body diesel made two round-trip test runs between Jersey City, N. J., and Marion, Ohio. West of that point to Chicago Erie's regular steam power will be used.

The second appearance of this streamliner will be on the eastbound trip of the Limited (train No 2) Thursday, June 28. The second westbound trip will be on train No. 1, Friday, June 29, and eastbound on train No. 2, Sunday, July 1.

"The test run was made to develop the relative effectiveness of this type of motor power on our railroad to help in determining the kind of passenger locomotives we should purchase in the future," said H. D. Barber, Operating Vice President.

Built primarily for high speed service the two units are arranged for coupling together to form a two-cab 4,000 horsepower locomotive. Each unit is mounted on six-wheel swivel trucks with traction motors driving four of the axles. The wheels are 40 inches in diameter. Two standard Baldwin 1,000 horsepower diesel engines are installed in each unit. They are the four-cycle type, eight cylinders in line operating at a full load speed of 625 R. P. M. and each driving a direct current main generator to provide electrical power for the traction motors.
