Sophomore Symphonies

Joycie, Weasles and Hattie Wahl seem to have new class rings. Where did you hook them, girls?

We see that Mary Alice Horan's and Dick Bill's romance (if there ever was one) is all washed up.

What time did Ruth Halsey and Ruth Shutt get in Tuesday night, or should we say Wednesday morning?

By the way, Louise O'Dell, do you like Leo Coleman, and don't burn your hand next time.

We hear Rosemary Mead is outdoing herself this Saturday night. A whole party, believe it or not.

Oh, Philip Mascho, could that be your ring, Agnes Davis is wearing?

Well, so long, fellow inmates. Be seeing you next week when the weekly visit comes around.—RS-JJ

More Pop in Popcorn

Popcorn eaters this season have a better than usual chance of getting popcorn that excells in "opppability" and tenderness. This is because of the 1946 crop comes from the new high-yielding, hybrid varieties developed by scientists. Popcorn from hyprid varieties expands about 25 per cent more in popping than does ordinary corn, and this results in greater tenderness and more corn.

Junior High Frolics

Billy Glover enjoys the games on Friday night (when a certain someone goes.)

We wonder why Donald Greenan is always late for school.

Beverly Sutor and Ralph Howard seem to gossip a lot lately.

JoAnne Marsh and Henry Baker seem to get along together.

Lyle Slocum should be more careful when he puts certain people's names.

Lena Bridge and Agnes Davis had a good time at the game Friday night.

Teresa Joyce and Dale Green make a cute couple.

Doris Burdick likes to flirt with a certain boy. Don't tell anyone, but his name is Richard Nye.

We wonder why Jack Perrin is always coming back to his room when the 7th class is in there.

Jack Wheaton seems to be going with Margaret Jackson a lot.

We wonder why Michael Connor is so short.

Mary Lou Clark likes to flirt with Daniel Lynch.

Clyde Jackson had lipstick all over his face Friday night after the game.

I wonder why all the pinball machines are out of order, I know why Kilroy was here.

I see Wayne Atwell wasn't doing so good Friday night.

Annabell has been making eyes at Kent Harder.

Scio Edges Out Panthers, 40-39

After Belmont's defeat at the hands of Scio a week ago the locals had a chance to take over first place in league play but dropped a close one to the same team that knocked Belmont out by a close 40-39 score on the Scio hardwood last Friday evening. The Panthers were way off form all through the game, while they watched Scio hold the lead at every quarter. The best the locals could do was tie the score two or three times, but never forging ahead. This loss puts the locals back in second place behind Belmont who has one loss, while the locals have two.

Kevin Lynch led the locals with thirteen markers, while D. Sturn led Scio with twenty.

Wildcats Trample Scio Jayvees, 34-22

The Andover Seconds continued in their winning ways last Friday night at Scio by rolling by the strong Scio Jayvee team by a 34-22 score.

This win gives the Wildcats a perfect season to date in league play. It looks like a perfect league year for the J-V's and the county championship if they keep going at their present speed.

Dunham, Lynch and Smith shared scoring honors for the locals with eight points apiece. Windus was high man for Scio with six.

Sour

"Is she really as sour as she looks?"

"Sour? Say, if she were to look up into the sky at night she'd curdle the Milky Way."

Plenty of Poultry

Ample supplies of poultry now available—that is the latest report from the Food Information Service at Cornell. Warehouses for the most part have an abundance of poultry on hand and new supplies, particularly of broilers, are coming from the farms. Why not plan to have chicken or turkey for this Sunday's dinner? The dinner itself is only half the value, for there are lots of dishes that may be prepared with the left-overs. Poultry provides a timely answer to both the menu and budget problems.

Shine Remover

If your good wool suit develops a shine on the seat and sleeves, here are some suggestions from clothing experts.

They say it's the soil combined with wearing and matting of the wool fiber that causes the shine. To remove the soil, sponge with cleaning fluid. On some fabrics sponging with water containing a few drops of ammonia or vinegar may help to brighten the color. And you can lift the nap of the wool by a brisk brushing, or even a fine sandpapering.

No Farm and Home Week

There'll be no Farm and Home Week at Cornell again this year. The reason is the shortage of housing and places to eat. Ithaca and Cornell simply cannot handle any large crowds inasmuch as almost 10,000 students are on the campus. The deans of the Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics say regretfully that, "until we can accommodate visitors as in the past, we have judged it best to hold off."

Potato Psychology

Did you know that the present day popularity of potatoes is due partly to the perverseness of human nature? When they were first introduced into France from the American Indians, people were inclined to look askance at this foreign (and probably poisonous) vegetable. But the French Doctor Parmentier, realizing their food value, concocted a subtle scheme to have them accepted.

He went to Louis XVI and asked for the services of the Royal Guard to hold elaborately publicized nightly patrol over a field of potatoes. As a result, potato rustling became a popular pastime on the theory that what was valuable enough to need royal protection was more than worthwhile to steal—which was exactly what Parmentier and Louis XVI had hoped would happen.

Uncle Sam Says

Hats off, my countrymen, to your newspaper boy. Once a year, we set aside Newspaper Boy Day to honor his thrift and enterprise. On Newspaper Boy Day in 1943 the late President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, paid him tribute for his inspiring work of selling nearly two billion ten cent war stamps. Today he rates a salute for setting an example in training for success. He is now enrolling in Treasury Department Newspaper Boy Thrift Clubs by which he invests his earnings in U. S. savings stamps and bonds, which will pay him $4 for every $3 ten years hence.

U. S. Treasury Department

Army Medical Corps Grows From Humble Birth

Now a world-girdling organization credited with unparalleled achievements, the army medical department began its existence in 1775 with the founding by the continental congress of a "hospital," which was the medical organization for the colonial nation's army of 20,000 men. It consisted of a director general and chief physician, Dr. Benjamin Church of Boston; four surgeons; one apothecary, and one male nurse to every 10 sick soldiers. From this beginning the medical department has expanded to a personnel strength of over 600,000 and has achieved phenomenal results from the standpoint of scientific advances attained and also in the health of the American army.

Nearly 97 out of every 100 soldiers who reach a hospital are saved in this war. Seventy out of every 100 wounded overseas have been returned to duty and nearly 27 per cent have been evacuated to this country. During the past three years, the medical department has maintained a record of less than 1 death from disease per 1,000 men a year.

Of the diseases which have decimated armies throughout history, few are heard of in the American army today. We have no typhus, plague, or cholera, one death from tetanus and few deaths from typhoid or yellow fever. Malaria has been reduced from hundreds of cases per 1,000 men per year to less than 50. Dysenteries have occurred among less than 90 out of every 1,000 men per year and have been readily controlled.

Here's Check on Good Health of Child

Here is a rapid check list of the general characteristics of a well-nourished child, typical of those devised by leading child nutritionists:

Body should be well developed with straight arms and legs. Posture should be erect with stomach in; head and chest up; shoulder blades flat. Fat should be in moderate amounts in curves rather than angles. Muscles should be firm and well developed.

Eyes should be clear and bright with no dark hollows or blue circles underneath, and the hair glossy. Teeth should be well formed and sound and gums firm and light pink with no bleeding. Skin should be smooth and firm, of good color, and blood red in good supply.

Appetite and digestion should be good, and elimination regular. Sleep should be sound and refreshing, and disposition good natured and full of pep.

Roach Control

As roaches live to eat, keeping all foods covered is the first step in discouraging them to remain in the house. Another means of reducing the roach population is to examine all boxes, paper bags and packages coming from the grocery and laundry. To control those that do, use sodium flouride. Use enough of this material in powder form to about half fill an ordinary tin fly spray. Spray the dust in cracks and crevices, in drawers, on tables, in shelves, around baseboards and other runways of the roaches as thinly as possible. Do not put it out in piles or as a thick coating. When it's sprayed thickly the roaches will avoid it. It should be thin enough so that the roaches will run through it. Sodium flouride is most effective when it is put out in the evening because the roaches move around mostly at night. If the powder is swept up, spraying should be repeated every three or four days. The powder is poisonous and should be kept away from children and pets.

Really Lovely

Lieutenant (roaring with rage) "Who told you to put those flowers on the table?"

Steward — "The commander, sir."

Lieutenant — "Pretty, aren't they?"

After the second cocktail the prices of the food don't seem so expensive.
