

THE ANDOVER NEWS

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

HAMILTON C. NORRIS, EDITOR

ANDOVER, N. Y., Mar. 21, 1894.

Bismarck was born on April 1, but nobody ever accused him of being a fool.

George Gould isn't as politic as his father was, or he would not have publicly endorsed railroad pooling.

Sugar and whiskey may prove as dangerous a combination to certain Senators as it usually is to other people.

The rumor that President Cleveland had banished silverware from the White House dining room lacks confirmation.

Doctors are looking forward gleefully to the early Easter and the big increase in their business among the giddy-headed, certain to follow.

The man who shouts the loudest about downing the trusts often does so to keep public attention from something else in which he is interested.

Senator Hill apparently wants it generally known that he is in the doubtful tariff column. It will add interest to his tariff speech which is billed to be "the greatest effort" etc.

The number of Congressmen willing to keep their jobs, although claiming to be overworked and underpaid, is astonishing, or rather would be astonishing, if there were not so many liars.

Blowing up the office of a newspaper because it attacked the Christian religion, as was lately attempted at Indianapolis, would furnish the strongest sort of argument in justification of such attacks.

Every man who turns up alive and well after somebody has collected insurance on his life furnishes the insurance companies a new excuse for delaying the payment of life policies upon those known to be sure enough dead.

The mid-winter fair in San Francisco is not the success its promoters had anticipated. It is not considered a failure by any means, but coming so close on the heels of the great Chicago exposition it suffers from comparison.

The Lost and Found Bureau of the World's Fair has just published an interesting list of articles which were found on the grounds during the season of the Fair. There were 880 women's umbrellas, 550 gloves, 25 veils, a carload of portmanteaus and handbags and 600 wraps. As a matter of chivalric courtesy and justice we demand the list of the men's losses. We just want to know the extent of the superiority of our sex.

A fool statute is what they call it in Iowa when they convict a man and shut him up and let him board it out. They say that a tramp is convicted of some caper, and having no money he is sentenced to jail and the county boards and lodges him. They want the law amended so he shall work it out or be kicked out of the community and authorizing every county to have a public kicker. Not much foolishness about such a proposition, either.

WISPS FROM WELLSVILLE

Town meeting has come and gone, and for a few days Wellsville was under red-hot fire, and heavy shells were fired from both sides and, as the boy said "twas which and 'tother," but by and by the whiskey side made a blunder and the temperance side took quick advantage, and if content to let well enough alone, Wellsville would today be a no license town. It's a big misfortune, and because of this, men will drink and women will wash, boys will drink and mothers will weep; and children will cry for bread, and so on to the end of the chapter. Meanwhile the unprotected, helpless victims of the whiskey traffic are undecided as to whose influence has just now cast them down into the slough of despond. As to ourselves, we are sitting on the fence. We have always been for temperance, but if, (mind Mr. News I say "if,") on a Sabbath evening a man will piously walk upon the platform with the preachers and speakers for temperance and seat himself in their midst, who the night before carried home a jug with three gallons of Decker's or somebody's else best, I say it again, then, Mr. News, I'm going for the fence and there I mean to sit, until one side or the other gets a little better or worse.

There are many rumors rife in our stately town that there are those in our midst who have tried the thing out and find matrimony a failure, or say they have, but we think it is a mistake. We are willing to admit there are many men and women who are the worst kind of failures, but we are not going to give our vote against marriage.

Whiskey gets in her first little work since town meeting, or rather the results have come in since and the whiskey went before. Some time ago P. M. Smith started to take to the jail a man sent there by His Honor. He was drunk and disorderly, or drunk and something. Well, he got away, and of course the officer was grieved unmercifully. It put him on his mettle, and he has been on the alert since. The man lives near the Pennsylvania line and when an officer came he skipped over the line. But our brave officials left town in the dark hours this morning and caught the man napping. Mr. Childs was stationed at the back door while Smith went in after the man, who made a dash for the back door, where he and Childs had a rough and tumble, then he broke and ran and Childs fired at him, hitting him under the shoulder blade. They didn't bring the man in, but Dr. Witter went out to see him and at this writing the ball is still there. Sitting on the fence we have tried to figure the thing out, but it don't seem to hitch—our figures, we mean. You see Wellsville furnished the whiskey and some one the ugly disposition when aroused by whiskey, and Wellsville furnished the ball that brought him down. Now, where is the blame of it? The boy, Mulby, Wellsville, or the whiskey, or the bullet, or who, or what? We are all at sea. Give us a lift and help us out. We're muddled. O.

Saved Her Life.

Mrs. C. J. WOOLDRIDGE, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it struggling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."
