

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 11, 1894.

Ferris, the man of the World's Fair wheel, offered $40,000 a year to the projectors of the new Manhattan Building...

There is no such thing as "next Senate," and so long as the Constitution lasts there never will be. The Senate of the United States is an eternal body.

Edgingham B. Wilson, of Brooklyn, has discovered somewhere on Long Island a perfect mine of Indian arrowheads.

W. B. Muller, of Omaha, says the eight hour day "would bring about increased consumption, a vaster display of productive activity, a higher intellectual and moral development of the toiler..."

Rev. Christopher Dovidat, pastor of a Lutheran church at Oshkosh, Wis., has expelled a printer from his church for being a union man, declares the New York Press.

The mining craze seems to have struck some portions of Georgia and Alabama pretty hard. A score or more of new gold mines have been opened in these States within the last three or four months, notes the St. Louis Republic...

United in Misfortune. Tramp—Give me a dime, please. I haven't had anything to eat in three days.

Tramp—Shake, old man. My wife's been doing the cooking, too.

THE PARTING AT THE GATE.

When the train is almost going, And you hurry lest you be late, Have you ever watched a parting, Someone parting at the gate...

There's the old maid with the bundles, Who will wail and wailing part, While she makes the rest all wait, Till you see his brows contracting...

There's a doctor and a lawyer, Coming near in deep debate, When the nation is in parting, In a manner most sedate...

Then a boy and a girl, Two young hearts, young and true, In the joy of their parting, And they look around at you...

There's a man and a woman, A pair who have loved so true, When the parting comes, They will look at each other so...

There's a man and a woman, A pair who have loved so true, When the parting comes, They will look at each other so...

There's a man and a woman, A pair who have loved so true, When the parting comes, They will look at each other so...

There's a man and a woman, A pair who have loved so true, When the parting comes, They will look at each other so...

There's a man and a woman, A pair who have loved so true, When the parting comes, They will look at each other so...

besides what would pay my debt, for the toy's messenger I'd put a new face on the trade. I'd not let Matthew Dean...

"The day's not over, Grizzle." And, as if to verify his words, the door opened and a visitor entered. A large man, with rugged features and massive frame...

"Trade!" Daniel Meade, replied, scornfully: "there's little trade comes to Globe Inn now. The new inn has caught the people's fancy."

"I can say I am sorry for you," Master Hobbs replied. "There's plenty known the story. I'll take some punch—that wind goes through a man."

"There, I think you do him wrong. If you could give him half as well—Master Hobbs' face was concealed behind his hand, but he was smiling...

"I do not think to find such good company as Master Hobbs," said the newcomer. "I did indeed I think I would meet you, the Marshal replied, nodding.

"It is very hard. But you must do your duty if you do not satisfy William Ayer tomorrow. As though gold grew on bushes, well, well."

"I come, Master Meade, to tell you a customer is near. I overtook him on the road. If my master was not so hard to please, I might have staid with my aunt till the morrow."

"I had a master of a hundred pounds beside what would pay my debt, for the toy's messenger I'd put a new face on the trade. I'd not let Matthew Dean...

The landlord served him promptly, and unnoted by the others, thrust back into his hand the coin extended him. The door opening the same time, Ezra Easty's words were verified.

"Good evening to all here." Then, perceiving Ezra, he addressed him directly: "Are not you that lad that spoke me on my way here?"

"Yes, call me a stranger. It's long since I set foot in Salem." At that the Marshal and Giles Ellis turned and looked at the sailor deliberately.

"This is the Marshal of Salem," said the landlord, "and this is Giles Ellis, as well known in Salem as the Marshal."

"Many years," the sailor replied. "Three of them where no white man is ever seen." "Ay, that must be a great distance."

"Oh," said Giles Ellis, greatly relieved, "he is talking of slave ships." Then the Marshal settled himself comfortably in his seat again. The sailor smiled.

"You did not take me for a pirate. Have I a pirate's job?" Ezra Easty shrunk into the corner closer.

"Mates," added the sailor, "if I were minded to relate what I've seen it would make your blood run cold. But that's my affair. Five years of life with hell in sight—three years in hell itself."

"No, no," said the Marshal. "No more to-night."

The landlord gave him a light and led the way up stairs. When they were in the room the landlord pointed to the window, opening inward. There is the look I made myself. Good-night."

The sailor examined the window, and observing a breadth out of the lead, looked about for something to place in the hole. Then he stuffed his handkerchief into the opening and began to disrobe. There was a knock on the side opposite the window.

"Where Satan is Active. In the legendary lore of Canada the devil plays a prominent part. He does not appear as the strong angel, who fell through pride, the enemy of God, but as the mediæval devil of monkish legend, the pretty persecutor of man."

Most of the diplomats who are sent to Washington soon acquire some English. It is of different grades, however, and usually adapted specially to the work to which the diplomat is to be assigned.

As a boy, Daniel Webster was not over fond of labor. On one occasion his father returned from a short journey and found certain work undone.

As a boy, Daniel Webster was not over fond of labor. On one occasion his father returned from a short journey and found certain work undone.

As a boy, Daniel Webster was not over fond of labor. On one occasion his father returned from a short journey and found certain work undone.

As a boy, Daniel Webster was not over fond of labor. On one occasion his father returned from a short journey and found certain work undone.

As a boy, Daniel Webster was not over fond of labor. On one occasion his father returned from a short journey and found certain work undone.

ASIA AND GERMANY

the Czar Promises to Visit Berlin and Potsdam.

Belgium Already Planning a Series of Fetes for the Occasion—Great Significance of the Revival of the Alliance—Big Financial Houses Resuming Business With Russia, (Copyright, 1894, by the United Press.)

Where Satan is Active. In the legendary lore of Canada the devil plays a prominent part. He does not appear as the strong angel, who fell through pride, the enemy of God, but as the mediæval devil of monkish legend, the pretty persecutor of man.

CANTON HOUSES IN DANGER.

Bellevue Acres Over an Abandoned Mine Settled Several Feet. SCANTON, Pa., April 9.—Residents of large and small streets and Wayne street, in the northern portion of the city, are in great terror on account of large cracks in the surface of the earth near their homes.

DAGAMA BOUND FOR PORTUGAL

The Warships With the Brazilian Refugees Leave Buenos Ayres. BRUNO AYRES, April 9.—The Portuguese warships Mindeola and Alfonso de Albuquerque, with Admiral De Gama and his staff aboard, have sailed for some after having taken on provisions for the voyage. Cabling between Buenos Ayres and Brazilian ports has been stopped.

Rewards at Carnegie's.

RENEWAL, Pa., April 9.—C. F. Cline, superintendent of the press shop of Carnegie steel works, has resigned. The state is not made public. He will be succeeded by David Kennedy of the party of forty-inch mill. He had a charge of $11 and the others who were on plate to Secretary Herbert.

Elmira Reformatory Trouble.

ALBANY, April 9.—It is not probable that the senate will take any action regarding the Elmira reformatory until the close of the hearing of the board of managers, which is to be accorded them by the governor this week on the charges preferred against them. It is likely that legislation is necessary as a result of the recent investigation.

A Healy Party.

LONDON, April 7.—The Standard says that Healy, the well known anti-republican, is trying to form a party of anti-nationalists are causing among the republicans a growing feeling of indifference to his rule.