A Board of Trade has been organized in Andover. Here's hoping it will accomplish more than the same kind of a body has in Wellsville.—Reporter. Beg pardon, neighbor, but it isn't "the same kind of a body," as you will observe if you keep your eyes on our bustling organization.

The Dairy Maids' Convention last Wednesday evening drew a full house, notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, which it was feared would keep many at home, and which probably did have that effect, especially on those living out of the village. The entertainment was even better than had been expected, and the audience showed its appreciation in a manner which could not have been misunderstood. The "Milk Maids," one and all, are to be congratulated upon the complete success of the affair.

This autumn weather reminds us that the lawn hose must soon be exchanged for the snow shovel, and those who have had experience with both do not look forward to the change with expectations of great pleasure. We have facilities for keeping our lawns green and streets free from dust in summer, and what we need next is something to keep the snow from piling itself over the walks and verandas in winter.
