WEIRD MYSTERY

Tracing a Dark Crime.

BY ALEXANDER ROBINSON, M. D.

CHAPTER I

I am a doctor, and usually a light sleeper... but on this night I must have been deeply asleep...

I followed more sedately, as I had a couple of small cases to look after... Glancing up, I discovered that we were before a house that was peculiar...

at last, coolly, as he turned his head and looked at me with a smile... I might have denied the soft impeachment...

of the contents, feeling rather than seeing the eyes of Mr. Ketcham upon me... You recognize the scent, Doctor? he asked...

punctured the lips and drawn blood must have entered the flesh... I bent my head lower to examine...
