The party who were at work at 10 o'clock Saturday night until Sunday morning, on coming to the surface, reported to Mine Inspector O'Brien that they heard the rattle of the gangway road may have been caused by some entombed men. The rappings were clear and distinct, as if some one struck the rails with a hard tool. The supposed signal was across the rescuers in the same manner a short silence, the answer came and distinct. The sound seemed a distance of some 300 feet where the rescuers were at. When this news reached the head of the shaft, but in a short time it was spread throughout the mine, and at daybreak a large crowd gathered, among them many friends of the victims. The heart hope had awakened. News from the pit has since been watched for, but beyond the rappings were heard there were no new developments.
