Shame on the hands that write; Shame on the page that publishes. Such slander to the light. feel, my blood with lightning speed Through all my veins fast fly,

".No Irish need apply." Are not our hands as stout and strong, Our hearts as warm and true, As their s who fling this mock at us

To cheat us of our due? While 'neath our feet God's earth stands Srm, And 'bove us hangs his sky, Where there is honor to be won,

The Irish need apply.

Oh, have not glorious things been done By Irish hearts and hands? Are not her deeds emblazoned Over many seas and lands?

There may be tears on Ireland's cheek, -But still her heart beats high; -' And where there's valor to be shown The Irish need apply.

And noble words are said, Wherever patient faith endures, Where hope itself seems dead, Wherever wit and genius reign, And heroes tower high,

Wherever manly toil prevails, The Irish need apply.

Wherever woman's love is pure As soft, unsullied snow, Wherever woman's cheek, at tales Of injury, will glow. And breathed is feeling's sigh,

The Irish need apply. If there is aught of tenderness, If there is aught of worth, Upon our sinful earth, That uncomplaining die;

To tread like them life's thorny road, The Irish will apply.

Till on Killarney's waters blue The soft stars cease to shine, Till round the parent oak no more The ivy loves to twine,

Till Nephin topples from his place, And Shannon's stream runs dry,

The Irish will apply. PHILIP T. O'CONNOR.
