It is likely to be more than thirty. three years—the time between present and the last war-before th country is caught in such a condition of unreadiness for war as it was when this war was started. Washington's advice, "In time of peace prepair for war," is likely to be more closely followed, for a few years, anyway,

The Spanish soldiers in Cuba are armed with one of the most modern rifles—the Mauser, which will kill at two miles—and it will be folly to sendtroops to fight them who are not equally well armed. The antiquated Springfield's, with which the greater portion of the volunteer army are now armed, should give way to new guns before these men are sent to Cuba.
