The city's full name is Santa Catalina de Guantanamo, and it has about of whom are Africans. There are a few Chinamen there, but the Chinese coat and pigtail look strangely out place in such surroundings. 'first walk through the streets of Guan tanamo the stranger finds somethin new and interesting at every turn. The streets are of fairly good width, and pavement, though it is somewhat prin. built on the same plan--around a large central court, which is filled with palms and all sorts of tropical vegetation. Unlike most buildings therea bouts, many of the houses have a second story, and around this-upon the inside runs a gallery upon which all red, and in addition have heavy woodever of either window sash or glass. The shops are built after the same general plan, and the traveiler ways surprised at their large displa ing else about one of these places
