The Government has just placed in the Smithsonian Institute a beautiful bronze bust of Christopher Columbus, which was taken from the flagship Cristobal Colon on the day of the famous fight off Santiago's harbor. The bust belongs to the Navy Department, which has put it in the Institution until a place can be selected for all the relics of the war recovered from the wrecks. The flags from the ships must go to the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Co education, and especially higher education for women, is accepted now by many of our colleges without stint, yet it may be interesting to hear what great thinkers have to say on the subject. Archbishop Keans, in an ad dress before the students of St. Mary's Academy at Notre Dame recently, said that from the very fact that women have facilities that enable them muster the higher branches of knowl-
