a kingly purple robe and mocked him and sent Him again to Pilate. The Jews Demand Barabbas.—Pilate made one more attempt to release, Jesus. On the feast days he had made it a custom to release one prisoner. & Pilate appealed to the populace, but the people, prompted by Jesus' accusers, demanded not the innocent Jesus, bu demanded Barabbas-one who l been really guilty of sedition, the crime they now charged against Jesus. Pilater allowed himself, against better instinct, to be prevailed upon by the cries! of the crowds and the demands of the rulers. Pilate passed the sentence of death, and then delivered Jesus over to the soldiers for the scourging usually given before a crucifixion. The soldiers. added their mockeries to the scene. They put on Him a gay robe, a crown of thorns on His head and a rod (for a scepter) in His hand. In every way they insulted the King of the Jawa.
