This Bank transacts a general banking business; makes collections, sells attention to all business at lowest rates The Sugimura household was recently rent with internal dissension, growing out of jealousies and misunderstandings. The husband believed that his spouse had told him untruths. He therefore wrote her a sweet little note, I inclosing his little finger, which he had neatly cut off with a meat ax. He told her that she had been guilty of ten lles; that he had ten fingers and would cut one off each day until she promised not to tell falsehoods any more.

The somewhat disgusting discovery has been made by Mr. Newell, hydrographer of the United States geological survey, who is in charge of the plans for the inauguration of the irrigation project approved at the last session of congress, that speculators have preempted much of the land to be reclaimed. Nine-tenths of it is public! domain, and in anticipation of its reclamation by irrigation speculators have hastened to secure it under the homestead law. This will not, of course, exempt them from paying the cost of irrigation, about $10 an acre, in ten annual payments, but it will enable them to I hold the property and dispose of it at a round profit, thanks to the government's improvement. Mr. Newell sees no way at present to prevent this exploitation of a national l mprovement for private gain, but hopes that the clause permitting the A. A. Mc CARN, secretary of the interior to fix the size of homesteads in the reclaimed district at forty, sixty, eighty or 160 acres may. compel these speculators to disgorge much of their holdings acquired under ' the 160 acre homestead allotment. While the government will not lose anything by this flood of speculators, the beneficent purpose of the law is likely to be seriously interfered with. Many prospective settlers will be unable to secure the benefits without submitting to the squeezing process at the hands of the speculators. The matter is one to which the coming congress !
