Heroism and Business.
Readers of newspapers with memories for details will recall that upon the occasion of the frightful wreck of the Royal Blue line express on the New Jersey Central railroad at Westfield, N. J., last January D. B. Gray of Philadelphia, who was a passenger on the ill fated train, figured prominently in the rescue work. The published accounts of the disaster agreed in crediting him with heroic conduct and in praising him for the splendid service which he rendered the injured passengers.

The compliments, public and private, which Mr. Gray then received were no doubt very gratifying, but he has apparently come to the conclusion after carefully considering the matter for nearly a year that compliments, however pleasing, are not sufficient remuneration for practical heroism. At all events, he has put in a claim for $10,- 500 against the New Jersey Central, the Philadelphia and Reading and the Pullman Palace Car companies as the amount he thinks he is in all fairness entitled to in consideration of the services he rendered those corporations on the occasion of the disaster. Here is his itemized bill:

Pullman Palace Car company, Pullman, Ill., Dr. to D. B. Gray:
To saving two Pullman cars of Royal Blue train in wreck at Westfield from taking fire, at a total loss of "value $14,000 each"—$28,000—$2,500 and one Pullman pass for life.

To saving two vestibule and one baggage car of Royal Blue train " " from taking fire, at a total loss of $31,000, $3,000 and one Central Railroad of New Jersey pass for life.

To saving two women from plunging through glass in doors, at $2,000 each, $4,000.

To saving man outside, "fire on his back," $1,000 and one Philadelphia and Reading pass for life.

"To enduring groans, shrieks, yells of those burning to death and service to injured and dying, dragging seats, etc., no charge.

"To injuries to my thumb, 5c.
Total, $10,500.00.

It is of course impossible to say just what view of this bill will be taken by the claim departments of the corporations interested or how the courts may view it in case the companies decline to settle. Nevertheless in these practical times it is not altogether inconsistent that a hero who saves lives and property should be entitled to something more substantial than fame for his heroism.

More than likely General Reyes has enjoyed himself more in this country than he will when he gets back to home and friends.

Some curious specimens of folklore and natural history are contained in a rare book called "The Sportsman's Dictionary," which was published 100-years ago. The author was evidently a Philistine among Philistines in his attitude toward nature.

Of the master musician, the blackbird, he says:
"This bird is known by all persons and is better to be eaten than kept, being much sweeter to the palate when dead and well roasted than to the ear while living; sings about three months in the year, or four at most, though his song is worth nothing, but if he be taught to whistle he is of some value, being very loud, though coarse." What an ear and mind!

And here is a story of the squirrel with the ring in it of the seventeenth even more than the eighteenth century.
It reminds one of the hares of Izaak Walton, that changed their sexes once a year:

"If what is reported of them be true the admirable cunning of the squirrel appears in her (where we commonly use 'his' when the sex need not be specified our ancestors often used 'her') swimming or passing over a river, for when she is constrained by hunger so to do she seeks out some rind or small bark of a tree, which she sets upon the water and then goes into it, and, holding up her tail like a sail, lets the wind drive her to the other side and carries meat in her mouth to prevent being furnished by the length of the voyage."

Of the wild boar we have this: "And what place soever he bites, whether man or dog, the heat of his teeth causes inflammation in the wound. If therefore he does but touch the hair of a dog he burns off—nay, huntsmen have tried the heat of his teeth by laying hairs on them as soon as he was dead, and they have shriveled up as if touched with a hot iron."

Stylish Winter

Nearly every merchant tells you that has "everything" that's in the height of fashion—"everything" that's new and desirable.

But that's more than we claim. And we positively have the largest and best stock of millinery in the city.

No one dealer can have everything. No one dealer can have all the best bargains.
No one dealer can corner the market.

We buy in large quantities for cost. We have the most competent buyers. We sell at uniformly low prices. It is rarely the case that any other dealer can duplicate any of our bargains. But sometimes we can.
