Came not when she'd ought to come. Well, the old ground hog was right-Seen his shadow plumb to night. Now for signs he beats 'em all, Better'n, a goose bone in the fall. *Long in March the days was clear An' says I, by jing! she's here. An' no bird was gladder'n 1 When the blue smiled in the sky, An' the grass was jist as greenour own likeness. Life and Religion, one and

As girl of seventeen. Then I'd go to bed an' say: I'll git up toward peep o'day, An' list sort of saunter out . Where the vi'lets ust to sprout, Not to git some—jist to see Out of curiosity.

An' I slept an' dreamed away . Of the comin' meller day,-An' i-swan-an inch of snow Was where vi'lets ust to grow.

Bu* I guess she's come at last, The l'low the time was past; An' there's somethin's drivin' me To jine in Spring's orchestry.

Music's nacheral in Spring, Everything seems wild to sing. Blackbirds chatter in the pines '-At the robins on the vines; And the peepers all night long. Keeps one drowsin' with their song.

An' I feel somehow'r ruther Every livin' things a brother. When I turn this way and t'other An' hear the harps a-goin', J jist slip in 'thout 'em knowin'.

Sort o'look for dandelines When the sun of Aprile shines;— Least-a-ways when I was young Aprile found some mostly sprung. Gone in swimmin' by first of May, Stayed in too, nigh half a day. This here Spring was dog-goned slow. Seems to me-but I don't know;

Nigh to sixty years has gone Since us fellers hed our fun, Hangin' 'round the sugar camp Drinkin' sap. An' then we'd romp 'Round the woods, huntin' things-Bears and injins—in them Springs. Sort of choke up when I think

Of the sap I ust to drink. Eyes go swimmin', scarce can see Seein' things that ust to be. Ah, the years are hitched to wings Wasn't they fine - them old-time Springs?
