DOWN IN A SUBMARINE.

How It Feels Traveling Beneath the Surface of the Sea.

What does it feel like to take a trip in a submarine boat—to be carried far below the surface of the ocean in one of those silent, invisible destroyers of the deep?

The following is the account given by an English official after an inspection trip on one of the submarines of the British navy:

"The captain was peering through a port, specially constructed so as to keep clear of spray. Suddenly he bent forward. He pulled one of the brass levers. There came a quick hissing roar as the water rushed into the ballast tanks. An indicator marked the quantity taken in, and then—and then we could feel a strange, heavy, water-logged motion coming over the boat. Now the surface of the sea was on a level with our eyes. The boat gave a little lurch forward. The rushing noise ceased. There came absolute, mysterious silence. There came a downward gliding sensation. The interior of the boat was plunged into darkness, a blackness to be felt. We could feel rather than hear the throbbing of the great, steady electric motor.

"As the room was flooded with electric light the captain said in a voice which echoed throughout the steel hull, 'I am now going to give you an idea of what submarine warfare would be like.'

"In a moment we could feel that the vessel was traveling at a slight upward angle. Then in a flash the whole surface came into view, the sun shining on the waves, and in the distance the dark hull of a ship outlined against the sky.

"Down again to fifteen feet, gradually creeping closer to our imaginary foe. Looking over a small white table, on which the picture of the surface was cast by the optic tube, the minutes seemed to pass like hours. Then the hand of the commander, which had been resting nervously on one of the indicators, was sharply drawn forward. An instant's suspense—and nothing but an ominous click as the torpedo sped from its tube.

"The atmosphere grew hotter and hotter as we once more sank to lower depths. The air became more and more vitiated, and at last we were gasping for breath. The captain quietly smiled across at us and advised us not to take long breaths, but to breathe quickly. At once we felt relief and began to get accustomed to what we had at first thought was bad air, but which was air artificially made and poured into the room for our consumption.

"Then at last came the signal, the tilt and the quick rush upward once more, the changing color of the water as we gazed at it through the port holes, the flash of the surface line across our eyes. The manhole was thrown open, and a wave of fresh air rushed in upon us."

Limits in Literature.

"You've read 'The Heavenly Twins?'" asked an Englishman of an Irishman.

"Yes, I have."

"And 'The Sorrows of Satan?'"

"Yes."

"And have you read 'Looking Backward?'"

"How the devil could I do that?" said Pat.—London Standard.

Overdoing It.
Mr. B., who was dining out, had done lavish justice to the good things before him. By way of a graceful apology he remarked with a beaming smile directed toward his hostess: "I've always heard, ma'am, that the highest compliment one can pay the house-keeper is to eat heartily. You observe that I have been exceedingly polite."

"Thank you, Mr. B.," smiled back the hostess. "Indeed, I think that you have carried politeness to the point of flattery."—New York Evening Post.

An Ancient City.
Rhodes still survives, a medieval city in all its defensive war gear of tower and curtain and keep. It is the city which the Knights of St. John erected in the midst of the Byzantines after they had been driven out of Jerusalem in the early fourteenth century. Probably few travelers realize how well preserved the tremendous fortifications and dwellings are.

Not a Matter of Locality.

DECLARED IN ANDOVER

holding several caucuses numerous conferences, all of which amounted to but little more than adjourn to some future date, a ticket has at last been named for village offices. It seems to have been declared in general approval with all the various factions and in the village.

It has been declared in the village, so far as the coming election is concerned, and matters are again to run smoothly and harmoniously. All are more to get in line and for good old Andover, make the coming year one of the best and most prosperous the town has seen in years. Always the case when people agree and afterward try to be reconciled, it was not for all sides to the contrary to give and take and honor to become friends. This one in Andover in a remarkable way the last week, much credit of all concerned, was done, and harmony is at about our beautiful in great chunks, for the few months.

A ticket recommended by the Union and Citizens caucuses will be known as the peace and is made up of the following candidates:

President, E. J. Atwood
Trustee (2 years) J. M. Hartum
Treasurer, J. P. Cannon
Collector, J. D. Chesman
The year was one of the hard-ville board has had to do with since the Village of was incorporated. With work of paving Main—and Center streets was also a problem of how to control the water at the springs like Andover's water plant and at the same time to our residents an abundance of pure water.

retiring Board tackled the men. They made good. If any criticism has been and all are agreed that have done the work well. Having work was completed, walks moved and put on ditches opened, and drains laid, and Andover has not only a good water re, but splendid pure water enter.

is much yet to be done. Improvements had to be ever to another season because of the lack of time after spring work and spring rework was attended to. It is there urgent need re repairs on the water to make permanent our of pure water. These matters are now under consideration of Trustees.

returning E. J. Atwood as agent for another year these movements which have already begun will be completed. A man capable of holding position with credit to the and to himself, and it wise move on the part of actions which have united ticket to choose him as their agent to finish the good work begun.

annual village report, published in another column of this of the News, shows the expense of a large amount of

But it has been spent and well. There does not seem to be an unnecessary item expenditures. It was very when the Board took of the work last year that would be high. But they are surely done much with what had. It is doubtful if there her village in the state as received more actual permanent value for the spent than has Andover. The retiring Board is deserving
