phatically than I can teach it. Men have bearned in the last few months that a few dollars in the bank, is worth more than a diamond ring on the inger. Collaterals have had fittle value, and have been viewed with suspicion. Men who own valuable real estate and have been viewed with suspicion. Men who own valuable real estate earnot sell as there is no market. Real estate will not sell while war is going on and money is scarce. Stocks decline, equities shrink, securities dwindle, everything decreases in value except a gold piece. That is supreme. It is a wise man who lays singly away a few of them. Everyone's policy should be to live within his income, and lay aside a few dollars each year even if it is not more than twenty-five dollars left over, is on the road to competency. Many of the laboring men of the country are powerless because they are moneyless If they choose to go on a strike, they can hold out only as long as the bread holds out. When the pangs of hunger set in, they give in and yield perhaps to unjust demands.
