TRIBUNE TIMES CELEBRATES

Hornell Paper Enters Forty-sixth Year Bigger and Better Than Ever

The American Press, published by the American Press Association has the following pleasant things to say about our neighbor the Tribune-Times of Hornell. The worst of the whole article is that it is all so.

The Hornell (N. Y.) Tribune-Times has just celebrated its forty-fifth anniversary, and in the history of newspapers in New York State or elsewhere it will be difficult to find a paper which has a finer record than this one. The paper to-day is issued by the W. H. Greenhow Publishing Company, the president of which is W. H. Greenhow. W. G. Masterman is vice president and general manager of the paper.

In June, 1870, forty-five years ago, John Greenhow & Son purchased the Hornellville Tribune. The paper was then nineteen years old, so that it is really over sixty-four years of age now and never stronger, never more useful and never more largely circulated than to-day.

The success of this paper has not been achieved because of any lack of competition. Several efforts were made to establish other papers in Hornell, but they all met with failure. This despite the fact that the Tribune made no attempt to monopolize the field but just went its way and published as fine a paper as any one could expect. The most notable of the unsuccessful competitors was the Times, which after a varied career, was absorbed by the Tribune at the request of the former paper.

MORE ABOUT COMMUNITY CHAUTAUQUA

Vitale's Band, the Spragues, Miss Sheppard, Douglas Mallock, Harry Hill and Hans Fleece, Dr. Seasholes, Brandon Booth

The youngest band director in the world will appear here with his band and will give a concert as part of the fourth day's program of the Andover Community Chautauqua.

This is Master Angeli Vitale, but a mere mite of a boy, hardly more than four feet tall who has already toured the world at the head of a seventeen piece band and has appeared before such noted audiences as Pope Pius X., King George of England, King Emmanuel of Italy and Emperor William of Germany. So great is Vitale's ability as a leader that, although still in his teens, he is recognized as one of the coming master musicians of the world, and has often been styled the "boy Creator." And Creator, by the way, is Vitale's chief idol, and the one man in the world he is most ambitious to rival.

It was under the direction of his father when Vitale was but a mere child, that he received his first music lesson and began his musical training. At the age of six the boy was an expert snare drummer. When he was seven he was a member of a boys band, and at the age of nine Vitale was leading his own band. Such was his rise to prominence as a musical director. For the past six years he has been the director of his present organization, a band of seventeen pieces, every member of which is a recognized artist.

But Vitale, the director, is not only a great band leader, he is an expert snare drummer and cornetist as well, and those who attend the Chautauqua the fourth day will hear several selections played on the cornet by him.

Vitale's Band gives a varied and interesting program ranging from the most popular "classics" to the latest bit of ragtime.

But as interesting in its way as Vitale's Band will be the appearance on the third day of the Community Chautauqua of Herbert and Floy Sprague. This "company" consisting of but two people, will present an entire play, taking the parts of all the other characters themselves and rendering each in convincing natural and realistic form. Herbert and Floy Sprague are particularly well-known for their presentation of "Rip Van Winkle" the masterpiece of the late Joseph Jefferson, which they will give here on the evening of the third day. They will also present "The Spirit of the Passerby," a shorter play, the afternoon of the third day.

Mr. Sprague has had a varied experience as an actor, having studied more than fifty characters, ranging from Shakespearian and Old English comedies to those of the more modern dramas. His "Rip Van Winkle" has been very much awake for twenty years, during which time boys and girls from seven to seventy have laughed at his kindly humor and grieved at his downfall, and taken the fairy trip to the summit of the Catskills.

Mrs. Sprague began her platform work with Mr. Sprague in 1907, after a long literary and dramatic training at such schools as Galloway College, in Arkansas, Henderson College and the Columbia School of Expression. She appears in "Rip Van Winkle," as "Catherine, Meenie" and "Kathleen."

The musical program on the third day of the Chautauqua will be given by Miss Mae Sheppard, dramatic soprano. Miss Sheppard will sing several numbers from grand opera, and will give a cycle of Arabian Love Songs in Oriental Costume. Her program includes, also, a number

GRANGES TO HOLD PICNIC

State Master Vary to Give Address at Alfred, Aug. 17

Plans are being made for a joint Pomona Grange and Farm Bureau Picnic to be held on the University Campus at Alfred on Tuesday, August 17th.

State Master Vary will be present to give an address, also Dr. O. S. Morgan of Columbia University. In addition to the speaking there will be various athletic events on the Athletic Field and a ball game between two Grange teams.

of old fashioned songs with some of the popular favorites. Miss Sheppard is accompanied on the piano by Miss Gertrude Guller.

Appearing on the same day with Miss Sheppard will be Douglas Mallock of Chicago, who will lecture in the afternoon on "This Town of Yours" and in the evening on "We Need to Live." Mr. Mallock speaks from years of experience in community study and is an advocate of the "back to the small town" movement.

"I believe that the small community is superior to the crowded metropolis," states Mr. Mallock. "The atmosphere is better, and the opportunities afforded for moral, healthful and sane living superior."

Mr. Mallock has been a newspaper man, author and public speaker. He has traveled widely in the United States, studying community life and community development, and has also spent some time in Europe. Mr. Mallock's writings have been endorsed by such men as Gifford Pinhot, Henry Sturgis Drinker, the president of Lehigh University, and many others. He is the author of three books, "In Forest Land," now in its third edition, "Re-sawed Fables" and "The Woods." Mr. Mallock is a former president of the Chicago Press Club and a former vice-president of the American Press Humorists. His styles of speaking is plain, simple and interesting. A continuous stream of humor and homely truths runs through all his lectures.

Mr. Mallock is but one of five interesting and well-known speakers who will appear during the five days of the Community Chautauqua, the others being: Dr. Charles L. Seasholes, humorous lecturer; Charles Brandon Booth, the prison authority; Harry Hill, popular speaker and Hans P. Froese, ex-Mormon, who will lecture on Mormonism. In addition to these lectures, the Chautauqua program offers such entertainments as a concert by the Vermont Players, the second day, and the Swiss Alpine Singers and Yodlers on the fifth day, childhood impersonations by Miss Elma B. Smith and novelty musical numbers by the Metropolitan Glee Club.

DR. ANNA SHAW'S SUFFRAGE AUTOMOBILE

The "Eastern Victory" is what the 200 women who gave Dr. Anna Shaw a new motor car, have named it. In a moment of expansiveness, at the Orange County Suffrage Convention, Dr. Shaw confided her longing for an automobile to Miss Aimee Hutchinson, who is a licensed chauffeur and runs her own car on suffrage errands. There were plenty of Suffrage leaders glad to know just what the National President wanted most; but they kept their intention about it secret.

"What are all these people doing here?" asked the veteran suffragist as she was brought into town on June 29th, after a hard speaking tour on the pretext of an important meeting at headquarters. There was a crowd in front of the National headquarters at 505 Fifth Ave., standing so thick about a yellow roadster that Dr. Shaw could scarcely get through it. "But I thought we came in here for a conference," she said, anxiously trying to wedge her way along. "Not until you tell us how you like your new car" began Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, who was all primed with her presentation speech in behalf of the Empire State Campaign Committee. She says she didn't say more than two sentences of it however, for Dr. Shaw's eyes filled and Mrs. Laidlaw's voice got out of hand altogether.

Dr. Shaw, who is afraid of no audience, owned up that her knees began to shake this time and her speech of acceptance became one of reminiscence. Standing on the running board of her new car she talked to the group of suffragists and the easily collected New York crowd which fringed the group.

"This is a long way" said she "from the days when Susan B. Anthony and I campaigned together, with one suitcase between us because we hadn't clothes enough to fill two; when we rode in buck boards, ramshackle wagons, any kind of vehicle we could get. It is owing to the brave women with whom I am proud to work that we have bridged the gap and can travel in automobiles now."

Dr. Shaw has always had a passion for machinery. She says she will learn to run this car herself. With characteristic humor she ended up: "I have a garage all ready for it. I built one three years ago, but at present it is occupied with two tons of the life of Susan B. Anthony."

ANDERSON TO ADDRESS ANDOVER AUDIENCE

State Superintendent of Anti-Saloon League Will Speak at Union Service in M. E. Church Sunday Evening.

Mr. William H. Anderson, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, will address a union service in the Methodist Episcopal church of Andover next Sunday evening. Mr. Anderson is not a minister, but a lawyer admitted to practice in a number of states, including New York. He is forty years old, the last fifteen of these years having been devoted exclusively to the Anti-Saloon League, among whose workers he ranks as a veteran.

Anderson drafted (and built the organization which passed) the Illinois Local Option Law, which is the basis of the Optional Prohibition Referendum Bill proposed in New York, and under which more than 1,200 townships and 55 entire counties have been made dry. He has built from nothing the present organization of the League in Maryland, and made state prohibition the immediate issue before leaving the state.

Within a little over a year from the time he took charge of the New York work, by mastery of the subject, grip of the situation, wisdom of policy, ability to enlist competent associates and loyal supporters, merit of legislative program and the sheer force by which it was impressed upon the attention of the state and made an issue, he succeeded in uniting the divided, scattered, not to say warring, temperance forces of the state upon a bill which appealed to the radicals on one hand while winning the commendation of such conservative journals as the Outlook on the other hand.

"In the Optional Prohibition Referendum Bill the temperance forces have a comprehensive program of proposed temperance legislation behind which are united all the various temperance leaderships. A part of the success of the present management of the Anti-Saloon League of New York has been that it has effected harmony in the working of the several organizations. The new York Civic League recently said in writing that it "Gladly yields the leadership of the temperance campaign in this state to the Anti-Saloon League and pledges co-operation upon the amended form of the League's bill." This union of forces makes speedy victory a possibility.

Those who avail themselves of the opportunity of hearing Mr. Anderson next Sunday will undoubtedly be given up-to-date information by a man who is well acquainted with the temperance reform.
