GET A NEW VIEW POINT

Too many capable men are held back from the larger achievement by that old, worn-out theory: because they are not as "well fixed" financially as their neighbors they have no chance to accumulate and get something ahead for future protection and comforts.

The regular and systematic use of our

for protecting and conserving one's income is practical and is proving of very material advantage in helping others to get a start. Why not investigate this plan? We shall be glad to have you.

MAKING PERFUMES.

How the Dainty Odors Are Stolen From the Helpless Flowers.

Pomades are the commercial vehicle for absorbing and transporting the perfumes of the jonquil, tuberose, jasmine and a few other species of flowers.

A square frame or chassis of white wood and about 20 by 30 inches in size is set with a pane of strong plate glass. On each side of the glass is spread a thin, even layer of grease, which has been purified and refined. Thus prepared, the frames are piled up in ranks six or seven feet high to await the season of each special flower.

When the blossoms arrive the petals are picked from the stem—the pistils and stamens being discarded—and laid so as to cover the grease in each frame. These being again piled so as to rest upon their wooden edges, which fit closely together, there is formed a series of tight chambers, the floors and ceilings of which are of grease, exposed to the perfume of the flower leaves within.

The grease absorbs the perfume, the spent flowers are removed daily and fresh ones supplied, and this process goes on from two to four or five months, according to the desired strength of the pomade, which, when sufficiently charged with perfume, is taken from the glass with a wide, thin spatula and packed in tin cans for export.

By these methods the delicate odors of flowers are extracted and retained for transport to distant markets, where, being treated with alcohol, they yield their perfume to that stronger vehicle and produce floral waters and extracts of commerce.

Coarser pomades are made by boiling the flowers in the grease and subjecting the residue to pressure. The spent pomades are used for toilet purposes and in the manufacture of fine soaps.

The process of preparing perfumed oils involves the same principle except that instead of solid grease superfluous olive oil is used.

Essence and flower "water" are produced by ordinary distillation, in which the flowers are boiled in water in large alembics. The vapor carries off the perfume and is condensed in adjoining copper tanks like ordinary spirits. Some of the retorts used for this purpose are of sufficient size to receive at once half a ton of fresh flowers, with the requisite water for their distillation.

When "flower waters" are to be produced alcohol is used in the distilling tank to receive the perfume.

HE GOT THE GOODS.

But Potter Palmer Handed a Severe Jolt to A. T. Stewart.

At the time of the war between the north and the south Potter Palmer was in the dry goods business in Chicago, and Levi Z. Leiter and Marshall Field were working for him. Palmer wasn't so well known, but he had a good reputation in the trade, and he didn't have to introduce himself when he called on old A. T. Stewart to buy some goods. After some dickering they agreed upon the price, and Palmer said that he would take about $100,000 worth. It was a little larger bill than Stewart exactly cared to sell young Palmer on credit, but he concluded to make the deal and told him to come in the next morning and arrange some final details.

That night some big war news came, and it didn't require any declaration by the government to inform every dry goods man in the country that the price of goods would take a big spurt up. Stewart recognized it as soon as he had the news, and he immediately thought of Palmer. He also thought of the big bill of goods Palmer had bought of him.

It didn't particularly tickle Stewart, that thought didn't. But it required only a few scratches of his red head to fix things to his satisfaction. He would simply tell Palmer that he was sorry, but that he didn't feel that he could sell such a big bill on credit, and as he knew that Palmer couldn't raise the cash immediately, why, that would end it, and the sale would be off.

Well, young Palmer called early, and Stewart greeted him in his very abruptest manner, telling him how sorry he was, etc., but really he didn't think it wise business to extend credit for such an amount.

"Just how much does the bill come to?" said young Palmer, seemingly sorrowful-like.

"Just $170,000," Stewart replied, and then he straightway gulped for breath as young Palmer drew an immense pocketbook from his inside vest pocket and, opening it, counted out 110 thousand dollar bills and, laying them quietly on Stewart's desk, said: "If you will kindly count them and give me a receipt I'll be obliged, as I must take the next train home. Ship the goods as soon as you can, and when you're out our way drop in. Always glad to see our friends."

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS

Annual Encampment at Detroit, Last Week—Sgt. Elmer Kemp of Andover Was Attendance.

16-19, 1915 Detroit, had the honor of entertaining the Veterans of Foreign Wars during their annual encampment. These men were all veterans of the Cuba, China, Mexico, and Philippine campaigns. Unlike other veteran organizations, there is not a man in the order who has not been in active service, and as a result, the paper put out by them is one of these veterans. It has been under fire, and he has not been in the line of duty for some time. He was present when an arm or a leg in some part of the body was marked with bolo or spear. He vowed that they were willing to answer any question at President Wilson might put them.

One of the meetings of the organization was brought before the public regarding what stands for the foreign born element in this country would take should the United States become involved in war with any of the European nations. However, but little discussion was necessary on this subject as all agreed that the element which has in the past and is at present making a noise, are nearly all men who have at some time or other away from their native land to express purpose of avoiding compulsory service in the army and that such men are not in any community but they are harmless in so far as they are arms is concerned. As we all know, there has been no law passed to prevent would-be heroes from going to fight for their native land. Thousands have returned to do so but they were men and not the barking dog organization will hold an annual encampment in the city of Chicago. All of the details and visiting members were at a civil life except Sgt. Kemp of Andover who is still in the service. Senator Crogo of Pennsylvania was succeeded as Chief in Chief by Attorney General of Colorado.

HARVEST HOME PICTORIAL

One of the rarely pleasant days of the season dawned upon us yesterday, August 19th, the day of the annual Harvest Home. This remark was overheard in the day. "My, my, my," said the Presbyterians a gentleman in with the weather-man early in the forenoon the ladies and carriages being in; 477 dinners were served; risk trade kept up at the cream and confectionery.

The address in the afternoon, Dr. Anna Shaw, President of the National Suffrage Association was the feature of the day. She has lectured in Andover on this date and at whenever this gifted lady has appeared her speaking is anticipated with interest by Andover people as well as by those who came from other parts to listen to her address. In no wise disappointed arguments favoring woman's suffrage and refuting those advanced by the opposing forces, presented so earnestly and ably by Dr. Shaw that her lecture were held in close attendance. The conclusion when the applause proclaimed the success of the day.

The attendance, white as usual, owing to the pleasant day was a plenty that our farmers themselves to pass in their harvest fields, was new very satisfactory to the charge of the day.
