GET A NEW VIEW POINT

Too many capable men are held back from the larger achievement by that old, worn out theory: because they are not as "well fixed" financially as their neighbors they have no chance to accumulate and get something ahead for future protection and comforts.

The regular and systematic use of our BANK ACCOUNT PLAN for protecting and conserving one's income is practical and is proving of very material advantage in helping others to get a start. Why not investigate this plan? We shall be glad to have you.

on reporting the matter he was censured for not at once making the whole lot of them prisoners. His reply was that he would rather be cashiered than take so mean an advantage of a brave and chivalrous enemy who had trusted him and who, after all, as their conduct plainly showed, were in some things little more than grownup children. —Pearson's Weekly.

ROOT REPUDIATES LETTER TO NUGENT

New York Senator Has Not Expressed Views on Suffrage.

DOCUMENT IS AN OLD ONE.

Anti-Wilson Democratic Boss of New Jersey Secured His Newspaper Publicity on Votes For Women Question by Making Public Remarks Made by Senator Root in 1894.

During the last month the anti-Wilson Democratic boss, James Nugent of New Jersey, has secured much newspaper publicity for an alleged letter in which Senator Elihu Root gave his reasons for opposing woman suffrage. For the authenticity of the letter Mr. Nugent took the most careful pains to vouch, and the good word was guardedly sent round that it had been sent by the senator to Mr. Nugent's secretary just two months ago.

Suffragists who read it said that they caught at once the whiff of a lavender scented sentimentalism distinctly late Victorian in essence. Sniffing on sentence by sentence, they were able to place the date as 1894 and the so-called letter as Senator Root's speech made before the constitutional convention at Albany that selfsame year. It seemed so unlikely that for two years Senator Root should have stood stock still in thought and language on the subject of suffrage that the Empire State campaign committee, basing on word that it had casually received, sent a letter to Mr. Root on July 17. The letter said: "We have been indirectly advised that you repudiate the letter which Mr. Jim Nugent of New Jersey has published as having been recently received from you and which repeats the statements you made in 1894 against woman suffrage. Will you be good enough to set us right as to the authenticity of the letter?"

Under date of July 22 Senator Root wrote the committee in reply: "I have received your letter of July 17. I have not written any letter or made any address expressing an opinion on the subject of woman suffrage during the present year, or so far as I can recall, for many years past. The recent publication in New Jersey reported to come from me was a copy of remarks made by me in the course of a debate in the constitutional convention of New York twenty-one years ago."

Hard on the heels of Mr. Nugent's attack on suffrage over the shoulder of this eminent Republican the wires buzzed with the word that a still more eminent Democrat would shortly take a

AN INFORMAL TRUCE.

It Was Faithfully Kept in Spite of the Absurd Situation.

One of the queerest informal truces on record occurred during the first Maori war. For three days the Maoris, strongly entrenched in one of their stockaded camps, or "pahs," had been firing at the British, who were similarly entrenched behind their own lines and who, of course, returned the enemy's fire with interest.

On the morning of the fourth day, which chanced to be a Sunday, the British soldiers were amazed to see the Maoris, dressed in their best clothes, come trooping out of their pah, unarmed, and making friendly gestures.

Thinking, naturally, that they wished to surrender, an officer hurried forward to meet them, carrying a white flag. But the Maori chief explained that they had no intention whatever of throwing up the sponge. Only they did not wish to fight that day and hoped that the British felt likewise.

The officer, hardly knowing what to do, demurred at first, but eventually fell in with the suggestion, adding as an afterthought that he was pleased to see that they had so great a respect for the white man's Sabbath.

"Oh, it is not that," promptly replied the chief. "The fact is that we have run out of ammunition and so cannot fight today. Tomorrow we have a fresh supply coming in. Then we will go ahead again with the war."

"Tell you what, though," he resumed after a moment's pause, struck suddenly by what he evidently conceived to be an exceedingly brilliant idea, "if you will lend us some ammunition we can start again, and the day won't be wasted."

Naturally the officer was obliged to decline this naive proposal, and of Good Men Seeking Political Offices in all Parties—Life for Nomination in Republican and Democrat Parties

political bee is beginning again in the county. The of the various party orations are grooming their candidates and getting them for the race.

the great struggle is the primary election. Republican party ticket is quite a certainty of if the nomination is secured the majority in Allegany being about 4,000 unless unusual conditions prevail, are not expected.

Fall there is a Member of County Clerk, Sheriff, of the Poor and two to be elected. The great are for member and sheriff. The Republicans have their Elmer Ferry, the present of Almond; Wm. C. Leggett of Cuba.

Ferry has been the Assessor for two years. He has been considered a strong by many, but he has been enough the past year to on the right side of every position on which he has voted that will not hurt his among the moral element of county. Quietly, on the one, it is confidently expected, however, that the Republican organization is more in sympathy with the Leggett candidate than for the others. But if Leggett or Duke don't get of the race it would look likely for Ferry.

Democrats will have to plates for Member, J. L. man of Andover and Archibald of Whitesville. We know of Mr. White, but we do not know of Mr. Cheesman and know to be a gentleman of clear position should he go nomination, as he undoubtedly fill as he has the backing Democratic organization, at the election as he undoubtedly will not, because the Republicans are in the majority.

The Progressives will have candidate, Harry Zimmerman Bolivar. He is a man that need to blush to vote for plain, practical business man kind that no one can let and by the nose, or dictate his to.

For Sheriff the Republican all up in the air. Some five candidates are seeking nomination at the primary election, with Wier of Angelica, of better chance. Charles for of Wellsville will be n by the Democrats.

D. Wier of Belfast will be by the Progressives. For County Clerk each party one candidate.
