Walter P. Cook, attorney for the receiver, H. I. Miller, and E. R. Darlow, manager of the Buffalo and Susquehanna railroad, announced that beginning September 13 next, traction interests represented by W. R. Page, president of the Western New York and Pennsylvania railroad company of Olean, will operate the line between Buffalo and Wellsville.

Attorney Cook produced a postponement of foreclosure and sale until September 13.

Commencing on September 13, passenger cars on the Buffalo and Wellsville lines will be run by gasoline motors, which will attain a rapid speed. Freight trains will as in the past, be operated by steam. Eventually the entire system will be electrified.—Allegany County Democrat.

AEROPLANE PROPELLERS.

The Care With Which They Must Be Designed and Built Up.

The efficiency of the complete aeroplane largely depends upon its propeller, and great care is therefore taken with its design and manufacture. The design depends upon the power of the engine, the speed and purpose of the aeroplane and the number of revolutions the propeller must make, which varies between 500 revolutions and 1,200 revolutions per minute.

A full size drawing of one blade of the proposed propeller is made and the shape of every four or six inches along its length determined. Then templates, or gauges, are made for each point which the finished propeller must exactly fit. All the blades, whether two or four, will therefore be exactly alike, which is very important. The blades, too, will be made sufficiently strong, not to "flutter"—that is, vibrate—and so run out of true, or the efficiency will suffer. They are usually made of mahogany or walnut, well seasoned, evenly grained and free from knots.

The difficulty of getting a plank of mahogany ten feet long one inch thick and one foot wide to fulfill the above conditions may be understood, and five to ten planks are required for each pair of propellers, which are made in one piece.

Each is first of all planed quite true and then glued, the faces being well rubbed together to insure a perfect joint. For, in addition to the heat of the engine, which tends to warp the planks, the vibration from the engine also tends to separate them. In some cases they are also pegged.

When all the planks are glued together clamps are put on and the whole left under a heavy pressure for two or three days until perfectly set. Then the central hole for the engine shaft is cut, for this must be exactly central, and all parts are measured from this.

It is then roughly cut to shape and allowed to settle for a few days. The idea of thus leaving it is that the strains released by the large amount cut away may settle down and not affect the shape and true when finished. It is for this reason that solid blocks are not used for propellers, but separate planks laid grain across grain. This process may take place twice or thrice.

It is finally carefully cut to shape and the gauges before mentioned used to insure that all the blades are alike and then polished and varnished. Occasionally the blades are covered with canvas, but this is not general, as it has been known to work loose.—London Chronicle.

Flowers at Funerals.

The custom of having flowers at funerals is very ancient. The Greeks centuries before the Christian era crowned the dead body with flowers and also placed flowers on the tomb. The Romans decked the funeral couch with leaves and flowers and spread flowers, wreaths and fillets on the tombs of friends. Most of our funeral customs are derived from the Romans, such as dressing in black, walking or riding in procession, raising a mound over the graves, etc., and among the rest is that of using flowers at funerals.

Impossible to Mistake Him.

It was an art class, and a young man of aristocratic connections was overheard asking for a sheet of paper in which to wrap up a piece of work he had produced which he wished to take home.

"I would like to wrap it up," he explained in a lofty tone to the master, "for I don't want to be taken for an artist."

"In that case," was the quiet reply, "don't conceal your picture, and then no one can possibly mistake you for an artist."—London Sketch.
