

New Fall Clothing

Don't make the mistake of buying clothes according to price. Our Smart and Guaranteed Clothes are sometimes misjudged as being high priced, when in reality the difference and service more than justifies a greater difference in price.

The range in price of our new Fall Suits and Overcoats is from $12 up, but the ones clustering around the $20 mark are par-excellent and can only be duplicated by first class city tailors, an assured saving of $10 if you come here to be fitted.

Raincoats are a very appropriate garment especially now. We have them in fabrics and styles you'd hardly know from an ordinary overcoat, still are rainproofed and can be used for the double purpose of rainy weather as well as when the sun shines.

Our Boys' Department is replete with new things, and as always moderately priced. No need of you sending to larger cities for the right thing for the little fellows, Suits and Overcoats from $1.50 up.

Knox Hats are correct in style and can be had in shapes to fit any head. Various colors in Soft Hats.

Knox Hats . . $5.00.
Beacon Hats, made by Knox . . $3.00.
Maxin Hats . . $2.00.

IN TIME OF PEACE PREPARE FOR WAR

By Rev. V. L. Eggleston

A traveler on a lonesome road took refuge from a storm in a cabin by the wayside, but as he entered he observed that the cabin had no roof, and was about to retire from it when he discovered a man sitting on the floor under a table.

"Why don't you put a roof on your house?" he asked.
"Because it rains, I cannot work in the rain."
"But why did you not put a roof on when the weather was fair?"
"It did not need it then," was the reply.

This philosopher under the table has a great many imitators. A nation that, although surrounded by enemies, makes no preparation for war is like a house without a roof. She does not need guns or warships in time of peace and when the storm of war bursts upon her she is not able to raise and equip an army, but must hide away as best she can and pay the penalty, as poor old China did when little Japan, with one-tenth of her population, came down upon her and gave her a dreadful thrashing the cost of which China had to pay in the form of a war indemnity of a hundred million yen, a yen being a dollar of our money.

Every living creature is surrounded by enemies who greedily seek its property or its life. But the dangers are not equally great. There are days of sunshine and days of storm. There are days that may be wisely employed in preparing for future dangers. The wild beast makes its den; the bird builds its nest and so on. In time of peace all prepare themselves for war and are safe, while the improvident are liable at any moment to be devoured, or to die of cold and hunger.

II.

The human body is surrounded by enemies and its life is constantly in danger unless there is a wise preparation for the attacks to which it is always liable. Invisible enemies float in air and water. The body itself is invested with the germs of disease ready to spring into aggressive life. The elements of nature are continually encroaching upon it and wherever it is weak and defenseless it is sure to be overpowered and consumed.

The struggle for existence is universal. There are also moments of especial danger. The wise man builds and strengthens himself in the hours of peace and plenty and then when danger comes upon him, when contagion floats in the air, when water that looks pure is the basest from disease he is safe, for he is fortified.

His system is stronger than the microbe warm enough to resist the chilling blast, more vital than all the enemies that lurk around him. While others fall at his side he stands like a house built upon a rock. He is like the nation that in peace has prepared for war, like the prudent ant that has laid up its winter store of food. He always has a roof over his head, food in his larder, money laid by.

There is always reason to think of these dangers, reason to keep body and mind brave and strong so that the protecting care of the divine providence may find us worthy of protection. And there are times when we need to be especially warned against the dangers that hover around us. The present is one of those seasons, a time of danger to the weak, of vigilance for the strong, a time of proving and of sifting the chaff from the wheat.

III.

See that gay party gliding over the snow to the music of merry bells, of song and laughter. It is bitter cold and for them all it will prove a day of trial. To one full of youth, full of vitality, the frosty air is bracing and invigorating but it smites the weakling like the breath of the destroying angel. A few days later while most of the party are boasting of that "delightful ride" some one, who was so gay and happy when with them, is under the doctor's care, suffering from a fearful cold, and perhaps it proves his or her last ride before being borne to the final resting place. It is perhaps some beautiful young woman just entering upon active life, full of hope and promise, and lacking nothing but a strong constitution, mentally strong but physically weak, and hence liable to the attack of every enemy to health that infests air, or food, or water, and so she must perish as nations do who in peace have not prepared for war. Shall we say in her case: "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord." No, the Lord did not take her away. He only permitted the laws of nature to act and this young and innocent creature had violated these laws. She had neglected the proper care of the body. In her enthusiasm and enjoyment of life she had disregarded all the prudent rules and regular habits that parents and teachers sought to impress upon her. The delight of the moment was enough for her, the future must take care of itself, but the future was under the law, and when the moment of trial came she was overpowered and her promising life cut short. In fair weather she had not thought of the future storm.

IV.

It is easy to talk of guarding against sickness while in health. But how shall it practically be done? It is often said that it is dangerous to think too much about health, that it may tend to produce the very diseases we are guarding against. It is true that one may give too much attention to health and to one's physical symptoms, but it is nevertheless wise to think just enough about these things and to anticipate evils by being armed against them. The wise man who is once in good health and who is master of himself may preserve uniform health year after year even 'til old age.

In order to do this the first and most essential thing is to so regulate one's life, and work and habits that the vitality of the system may be kept up to the highest possible point. The body must be well and abundantly nourished and over-work must be avoided. The over-worked body or brain is always unhealthy, and there are many ways of over-doing. The amusements and indulgence of the idle may cause it as well as the long working hours of the humblest laborer. Sexual excess, both in thought and deed, is the chief cause of vital exhaustion. The young are deplorably ignorant on this subject and evil habits once established are usually too strong to be overcome even when their real character is known. When the vitality is thus exhausted the mind is weak, and the body is an easy prey to every contagion and to every exposure to cold.

V.

A young person with no deep-seated disease, who is sexually pure, who is properly nourished, and who sleeps soundly and enough, will stand almost any amount of work without harm, while neglect at any one of these points is sure to reduce the vital force below the point of safety and to start both mind and body on the downward road toward disease and death. The doctor cannot save the body that lacks vitality. He cannot go up on the field where the enemy has already gained possession and turn the tide of battle.

It is only in time of peace and strength that "the house we live in" can be fortified against the enemy that is sure to conquer if he finds the defenses neglected, the sentinel absent from his post, and the master of the house ignorant of danger and thoughtful only of present enjoyment regardless of consequences.

This is not a healthy season of the year. Who is armed against the threatening enemies that lurk in the air and water and food? The wise are armed, while the ignorant are weak, the victim of lustful appetites, is unarmed, and must take the consequences, for nature is terribly unforgiving and absolutely inflexible in the enforcement of its laws. "Obey, or die" is its unflinching word to all the children of earth.

COMPLETING THE GREAT HIGHWAY

Hornell, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Contracts for the last stretch of road in the highway crosses the entire southern tier of this section of the state connecting Dansville and Elmira will be let in the very near future. This stretch is between the village of Arkport in Steuben county and bids will be opened on the twenty-fifth of this month and according to law will be advertised for twenty-one days in advance. The contract will also include a brick pavement through the village of Arkport from the business section to the railroad tracks and it is planned to make this part of the road wider than the rest which will be a sixteen-foot road. The village has already voted to pay $3,100 which is their per cent of the cost and Assemblyman Prangen has been advised that this contract will surely be in the Fall letting which takes place on the twenty-fifth of this month. When this road is completed, the Wayland-Colchester road, the Jasper-Woodhull stretch and also the Canisteo-Greenwood contracts are all finished it will make a continuous stretch of state highway from Dansville through this city to Greenwood, Aldison, Corning and on to Elmira. Contractor Kennedy who is constructing the Canisteo-Greenwood and the Jasper-Woodhull sections stated that if the weather remained favorable these two roads would be completed this year.

HER DREAMS CAME TRUE

MELLE, C. GAUDREAU
Rochester, Jan. 14th, 1918.

"I suffered for many years with terrible Indigestion and Constipation. I became thin and miserable. I had frequent dizzy spells and became so run down that I never thought I would get well again.

A neighbor advised me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. I did so and to the surprise of my doctor, I began to improve and headed off my troubles with 'Fruit-a-tives'. I continued this medicine and all my Indigestion and Constipation was relieved. I consider that I owe my life to 'Fruit-a-tives' and I want to say to those who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation or Headaches, try 'Fruit-a-tives'. Give this lovely fruit medicine a fair chance and you will get well the same as I did."
