Thanksgiving Linen Sale

$7,500.00 Stock of the Finest Scotch and Irish Linens

A year ago, at the close of the most successful linen sale in our history, we began to prepare for this year's Linen event. Anticipating the certain scarcity of flax, eighty per cent of which is grown in Russia, we contracted with the great linen mills for immense deliveries. Since the arrangements were completed for these large shipments, from the bleaching greens of Europe, linen prices have increased fifty per cent and today, were we to buy over again the same linens, now in the stocks of this, the recognized "Linen House," we would be required to pay more than the prices we ask during

THIS GREAT ECONOMIC EVENT.

Now is the time to buy linens for the home and we submit that you take advantage of this opportunity to replenish and stock up the linen chest against a time when linens will certainly be higher in price.

BURT HILL

School Exhibit

The Burt Hill school held an exhibit at the School building, Monday night, Nov. 1st., consisting of a variety of vegetables, flowers, grain and class work.

The tables containing the display were covered with moss and decorated with candles. Judging from the quality of the products on exhibit, the farms of this vicinity are very productive. Regardless of the unfavorable season, one young man, Otis Norton was fortunate enough to secure sixteen saleable Ohio Red potatoes from one hill.

Leaves and specimens of the wood grown in this locality, together with maps, notebooks, views, and drawings from Physiology and Nature Study were very prettily arranged on the walls.

The program consisted of recitations, class exercises and farces, being divided into three parts; Part 1 in honor of the American poet James Whitcomb Riley; Part 2 to the memory of Columbus; Part 3 for Hallowe'en. This was followed by a social good time in which many took part in the stunts and paid a visit to the fortune-teller's booth.

Mrs. Minnie Scribner, the teacher, served popcorn and grapes.

The room was filled to capacity all manifesting great interest not only by their presence but by lending a helping hand to make it all a success.
