The protracted meetings closed Sunday evening. The meetings throughout were largely attended. A few souls made peace with God through the blood of the cross. Many renewed their covenant, and many, very many, assured the pastor of help received of new light upon the path of new inspiration and purpose in service. Yes the special meetings were worth while. We are abundantly repaid. Mr. and Mrs. Scott left Andover Monday morning. Their engine was much enjoyed and they left many friends in this place. We hope to have them with us again some time in the future.

The Brotherhood are planning a free social for members and their families and friends on Friday evening, Feb. 13th. A good time is assured.

ON BOARD THE OSCAR II.

Descriptive Story by J. E. Jones, Special Correspondent of the Andover News with the Ford Peace Party.

Oscar II.—As I write we are nearing the Shetland Islands, and I hope to achieve one-half of a boyhood ambition, for I suppose that I was quite like other boys in feeling that there was a particular spot, represented on the map, which I would like to visit. That spot was the Shetland Islands, and I had it figured out that I might go there some day and get a pony and ride it back home. But I am told that the horses that have made these islands precious to childhood for ages, have nearly all been used, and are being destroyed in the countries at war.

We were about four hundred miles away from the British Isles when we were told that we had entered the war zone. The sun rose about nine o'clock in this far Northern latitude and by four o'clock it had set. At five our ship was suddenly halted and we all rushed on deck and discovered that a British cruiser was alongside. We were to have our first experiences and the first impressions of real war, and as a giant of the seas, sinister in the blackness, with only a few lights to indicate its nearness, talked to our wireless, I think that we all wondered what might be the reception of the British Navy to our Peace Ship. A sea boat soon pulled alongside, and while it was approaching I think the passengers were all greatly concerned in the appearance of our own ship, since they were all talking about the brilliant illumination, or lights, which showed the name and "neutrality" of the Oscar II. The red, white and blue and the field of stars may be an inspiration to us people of the United States, but the flag of Denmark, brilliant in the center of our powerful searchlights certainly looked good to us. There was a tense anxiety that is hard to describe, because we knew our ship had been "captured." People talked in subdued tones, and those who loved one another stood together. Soon Lieutenant Jenkins, an ensign and four marines came up over the side of our ship. It was noticed that the men carried side arms of a particularly threatening character, but when in reaching for his "adder we discovered that one of them wore a wrist watch we were thankful for this evidence of gentleness. A stack of rifles being raised to the deck of the Peace Ship looked incongruous. We were promptly reassured when we found that these Britons meant us no harm, and the Lieutenant, who was addressed as "Lieutenant" was honored by every one on board when it was found that he was a "jolly old top" and a good fellow. But there was no applause of greeting to these men, and they came to us in silence, bespeaking the serious trend of thought which this first sight of the British Navy and the horror and uselessness of war had instinctively made upon us. There was nothing reassuring in what Lieutenant Jenkins told us, since he frankly stated that no ship could sail in these seas without being in danger. There are many mines and one of the reasons that neutral ships are taken in charge is to keep them out of the pathway of the mines. I suspect that that is the reason why we are going on the perilous route by way of the Shetland Islands, before we are taken into Kirkwall. We know, too, that in these very waters the German submarines have operated with in the past few months and brought their wreckage to confusion. At two o'clock this morning half of our company were still finding interesting things to talk about in the cabins and corridors, but no matter what anyone felt there was not a single expression of fear. In explanation, I have heard a definition that seems plausible, and one of my friends has said that fear is largely a momentary sensation and does not exist until the critical period is at hand. For instance, men who are hanged maintain their courage until the last moment. It is perhaps this better should find its way to the bottom of the sea instead of in to the mails at Kirkwall or Christiania, it is certain that it has not been written when its author experienced any particularly unusual feeling. Only plain common sense makes us know that in the war zone we are likewise in the danger zone. I was given a practical demonstration of this a few hours before I left Washington, when I was notified by a company that had carried my accident insurance for several years that the same was suspended temporarily. The moon rose last night as customary, the waves dashed by as they have for ten days, we feel the throbbing motion of our ship and life goes on regularly in the war zone the same as it did before we reached this perilous spot. Therefore we do not appreciate the danger which actually lurks in our pathway, because we know that the chances are greatly in our favor. But should we survive contact with a mine or some other accident, the first thing that we would have to write about in "preparedness" would be "preparedness." We have quarreled about "preparedness" on this "Peace Ship," but while it may not fit the views of the pacifists, as applied to nations, yet it seems to have been adopted by individuals, as life preservers are saving on the floors of the state rooms everywhere, while on deck the life boats have been made ready to drop instantly with human freight into the sea. I think most of us discovered the changed conditions of life boats at practically the same time we sighted the English cruiser; and we understood the reason why the canvas covering had been removed, the bars ready for the locks, the frames prepared to be placed in action in a moment—and if there were any doubts about the matter the fact that each boat was provisioned for as large a party as it could seem to settle the matter. And yet, notwithstanding all these things, we are unafraid. That is human nature asserting itself, and in this instance I am inclined to think that these good men and women all possess something of the spirit of adventure, and the love for a little of the actual danger of the situation. I am trying to describe the situation since for days we must live in this condition—a condition which on the one hand is serious and sinister, and can only be realized by sober, thoughtful contemplation of the actual condition. Moralizing is a happy characteristic of humanity that industry, commerce and transportation is undisturbed, for as I am dictating his story I hear all about me laughter and happiness; the band is playing home songs on deck and we are apparently as free from anxiety as we could be in our own homes at our own firesides. The members of the party are writing letters which they confidently expect to mail at Kirkwall, although we are told that the censorship will delay the letters longer than as though they were mailed in Christiania. The optimism of humanity which I have described among the Peace Pilgrims, is further proven by the optimism of those letter writers and newspaper men who have such unbounded faith in human agencies, since they are flying in the face of all advice. Firm in the belief that because Scotland is nearer than Christiania, that letters, even in the war zone and under the restrictions of the censor, must "of course" reach their destination ahead of those that might go undisturbed from a neutral port two days farther away.

WAR UPON PAIN

Pain is a visitor to every body usually it comes quite unexpected, you are prepared for every emergency, you keep a small bottle of this medicine handy. It is the greatest killer ever discovered, simply rub the skin—no rubbing required—the pain away. It is really wonderful. Mervin H. Solister, Berkeley, writes: "Last Saturday, after being around the Panama Exposition all day, I came home with my neck so stiff that I couldn't turn. I applied the Liniment freely and went to bed, my surprise, next morning the pain had almost disappeared, four hours after the second application I was as good as new." March, 1915.
