FARMERS AND DUDELETS

"Oh, he's just a farmer out here in the country!" We stood on the street corner the other day and heard that People usually pay as much at remark passed by one of the 'brilliant' young masculine striptention to a store as a store pays lings of our town as he "bummed" the makings from a friend.

The farmer, to be sure, was just a farmer "out here in the country." He wore overalls and drove his wagon into town, When a stingy dog gets hold but his automobile rested snugly in the garage. He owns one of of a bone he growls at every the most valuable farms in this whole section of the state. His other dog in sight-just like home life is ideal and his wife and children have everything they desire. His simple word is as good as his check and his check Hunting Villa reminds us of would be honored for an amount that might stagger one.

He is a man, a real man, a man whom other men acknowflea-with apologies to the flea, ledge to be a man among men, even if he is "just a farmer out | here in the country."

But what of the stripling, what of the dudelet?

He is just one of that numerous class who always know ev-Some, he avers, even laugh at erything and never do anything, who amount to nothing and are their husband's jokes. But ours worth less. He is just a dudelet, and it is doubtful if he ever attains to the "dignity" of being even a real dude. Yes, he is "just a farmer out here in the country," but he is a dead here is the lamentable fact our friend; he is everybody's friend and time may prove him to that you never know that you be the "friend in need" of the poor, yapid, brainless dudelet. We need a thousand more just like him—this man who is "just a farmer out here in the country," and whom we are to know as a friend, and a few less of the dudelets in And

Poor deluded dudelet! May he never be worse:

HOW A WESTERN TOWN DOES

Whenever we see the business men of any community wake up and go to boosting, we take off our hat to them. Our lid a therefore raised to the men of this town, as they have evidently caught the spirit and are boosting.

Arvada, Colorado is an example just now of what can be done where people want to do.

In some manner the impression was spread about that the! and positively and absolutely business interests of Arvada did not invite an overly close relation with the community at large. It injured the town.-When the impression reached the ears of the business men, doubted attraction. The week in they wasted no time in vain regrets. They went to work like men which you advertise—and offer—and organized a community club—the same as Andover has done. The object of these clubs is in the main to unite the interests the towns and the surrounding trade territory by bringing all of the people into closer touch, one with another. In Arvada they have organized an exchange, with a compe
