THE YEAR'S BEST HOLIDAY

On Friday, June 23, 1916, the N. Y. & P. Ry. will issue very low rates from all points in their line to Hornell for the accommodation of their patrons to witness Parade and Circus of Ringling Bros. Why not make this day a holiday and arrange your business so that you can go? The parade alone is worth your while, not saying anything about the Wonderful Show with its Monster 5 Continent Menagerie, taking 89 double length railroad cars to transport it, and all both Menagerie and Circus, for the price of one single admission of 50c. See excursion bill for further information.

PREPAREDNESS

Means a lot of things and one of them should be, make all arrangements or be prepared to go to Hornell on Saturday, June 23rd, via N. Y. & P. Excursion train to witness the Great Ringling Bros. Parade and Circus. This should give you sufficient notice to prepare your engagements so that there should be nothing left in the way for you to witness this great show.

"GINGLES JINGLES"

GETTING BUSY.

I said to myself with a sort of grin, you cannot arrive, if you do not kick in. You've squandered enough of your valuable time. Come through and get busy or give up the climb. This earth is no morgue and no place for the drones, so speed to the limit or wait for the bones. You had a good start, your equipment was fine. You could have made good had you but kept in line. So blame yourself if your luck has broke wrong. The guide posts were many as you went along. You can't blow your coin and make pleasure your God, or you will wind up six feet under the sod. So right about face, make a start for the heights, and capture a crown for the fellow who fights. You know that you can't make the summit with ease, and that to make good you can't do as you please. You know that you must pay the price if you win, but you will get nowhere if you don't begin. Then switch on the current, release all the brakes. Get down to the real stuff and cut out the fakes. Develop a punch and go in for a place. You're never too old to get into the ring.

MUCH KHELP GOES TO WASTE

Tons of Material Might Be Harvested Yearly Along the Pacific Coast, Says Authority.

A year's output of potash from the kelp of Puget sound would bring $6,000,000 at the present war-time prices, according to Prof. George B. Rigg of the botany department of the University of Washington.

Kelp is abundant and easily accessible in the sound, said Doctor Rigg in a recent lecture, and three factories might be kept busy every working day of the year, each producing 5,000 tons of aurate of potash yearly. Each would consume 500 tons of the seaweed daily. Ordinarily the year's production of 15,000 tons of potash on the sound would be worth $600,000, the average price being about $40 a ton. At present it brings about $400 a ton.

Fifty thousand tons of kelp could be harvested yearly along the Pacific coast, Doctor Rigg asserted. The beds lie from Mexico to western Alaska, but are of course not all commercially accessible. All the beds belong to the states adjacent, and no laws have ever been passed restricting the harvest. The kelp is free to anyone who wants it.

WAR RAISED PRICES.

"Is it an optical illusion, a case where your eye deceives you, or do they really, in some of the shops where price tags are a feature, take off the regular tags and put on tags of a little higher price?" Such was the query propounded the other day by a rural adventurer in the city. This is not, however, a question for a debating society. It is a fact or it is not a fact, a condition the existence of which must be proved or disproved by test.
