ALMATE ARCTURED SIDE

In the formation of our views on national, state and municipal affairs many of us are naconsciously led into the error of believing that there is but one side to the question before us our side.

When we become imbued with this obscession we likewise become intolerant of opposition and refuse to recognize the possibils of any views except our own.

We might cite a few instances.

We favor a certain man for president in the forthcoming na-. | tional election. To our mind he is the only man possessing the necessary qualifications for this exalted position. All others are mediocre and not worth consideration. And yet, as a matter of fact, there is not a man in the race for the presidency to-day but what has his good and valuable qualities, ass well as his weak nones, for the brains of this nation are not centered in any one man. We have our personal choice, and we sincerely believe that y the man of our choice is the best fitted for the office, but we

We may favor a certain system in municipal government and Oh, no, the political pot is not our neighbors may entertain views radically divergent from our boiling one wee little bit. It is own.
