144 YEARS AGO TO-DAY

The British Man-of-War, the "Gaspé" was Burned in Narraganset Bay by a Party of Americans from Providence.

The pride of England suffered greatly from her several sea defeats administered at the hands of the young country in the New World.

Proud of her navy, Great Britain felt almost secure from the small fleets of many other countries. A grim determination to win made America's victory possible. Did you display half this purpose in connection with your personal affairs and savings there would be no cause for worry regarding the future.

The thrilling scenes at sea, including the shipwreck, will keep the audience almost breathless while the scenes among the gentle folks of old Japan will give the picture an unusual atmosphere and charm.

CANOEING ON THE DELEWARE. The popularity of canoeing appears to be increasing from year to year. This does not seem remarkable, however, when the great physical benefit to be derived taken into consideration. Paddling is an excellent exercise as it is not too strenuous and it is usually performed in the water of some healthful resort where the purity of the air is unexcelled. Every season new trips are planned by lovers of this fine sport. To those of the canoeing fraternity who are in doubt as to just where to go this season the Erie Railroad Company has just issued a leaflet in which a very interesting cruise on the Delaware river between Deposit and the Water Gap is beautifully described by an enthusiast who makes the trip at least twice a year.

To one who loves the swish of the paddle, the Delaware is an enchanted body of water. Though the wigwam no longer dots its shore, the lovely river is unchanged, save that where the Indian trail once wound its tortuous way, now stretch the ribbons of shining steel and mighty trains go hurling by, bearing the white man from his sweltering cities into the cool valley of the Indian.
