Automatic Bargain Table In The Basement

A plan that makes it possible for you to buy wanted merchandise at your own price.

This table holds 20 articles, every one different, most of them household necessities, labor saving devices and home beautifiers.

The plan is this:—An article is placed on the table marked at a special price. If it has not been sold in the period of a week it is automatically marked down 10 per cent. If still another week passes and the article is still there, down the price goes 10 per cent. more. And so on until the article is sold or until at last the price is reduced to 1c (since 10 per cent. subtracted from 1c still leaves 1c).

When an article is sold from the table another one is put in its place, so that the table always holds 20 articles.

Come in tomorrow and examine these remarkable offerings

The table has been in operation three weeks and a great many articles have been marked down three times. Just the thing you have wished for so long may be on the table.

You may buy it tomorrow or wait a week and get it 10 per cent. lower. You may even wait several weeks, but you take your chance, of course.

Come in every week, watch for new bargains and buy just what you want at your own price.

The Fight Against Infantile Paralysis

The Following Bulletin Was Issued Today by Commissioner Bizzell of the State Department of Health:

INCREASING dread on the part of the public regarding the epidemic of INFANTILE PARALYSIS now prevailing in New York City, and especially in the Borough of Brooklyn is largely due to the character of the disease, the apparent mystery which surrounds its method of spread and the wide publicity which, as a measure of protection to the general public, health officials throughout the country have deemed essential to utilize in the campaign against it.

A disease which kills 20 per cent or more of the persons attacked, which leaves 75 per cent more or less crippled for life, which may do its deadly work in TWENTY-FOUR HOURS from the onset of symptoms and against which previous robust health seems not the slightest protection, can only be regarded with extreme gravity, and yet, when the epidemic has run its course or has been checked, it will be found that the toll of life and permanent damage to the physical condition of patients will be far less than that which was caused during the past winter by the epidemic of grippe and pneumonia and which is being caused by the ever present scourge of tuberculosis. The degree of INFECTIOUSNESS of infantile paralysis is very much less than from many other communicable diseases, such as measles, smallpox, diphtheria and scarlet fever, or rather many more individuals are IMMUNE to it than to the latter diseases. The occurrence of more than one case in a household is the exception rather than the rule, and cases cared for in hospitals practically never infect other inmates or attendants. On the other hand, it seems to be indisputable that many persons can carry the disease germs, especially in the nose and throat, for weeks and even months and thus start up new centers of infection.

New York State, outside of the city, is now suffering from an influx of children in the incubation stage of the disease, in the acute stages or recovering from it. This unfortunate fact is DUE TO IGNORANCE on the part of mothers, to willful breaking of quarantine in New York City and sometimes, it is to be feared, with the connivance of physicians. Health officers and other physicians throughout the state have been given very DEFINITE INSTRUCTIONS regarding the protection of their communities from individuals, especially children, coming from infected districts. The railroads are co-operating in every way possible with the Department of Health. A record is being kept of every case reported in the state outside of the city and the source of infection traced if possible.

It is to be hoped that communities will use every reasonable precaution to protect themselves through their local health departments, but that they will be guided by COMMON SENSE and inflict as little hardship on arrivals as possible. On the other hand, such persons must be willing, even at the expense of considerable inconvenience and annoyance, to place themselves absolutely under control of the local authorities. The present is not the time for hysteria or panic on the part of the public, but for the exercise of calm judgment and ABSOLUTE OBEDIENCE to the rules which health authorities have seen fit to impose for the protection of the public health. The fact that in no previous epidemic of infantile paralysis of which there is record has there ever been put in motion such a vast and efficient machinery for control of the disease makes it very probable that before long there will be concrete evidence of the value of this work and a RAPID SUBSIDENCE of the number of cases. The fact that the minds of the most eminent sanitarians and research workers are directed toward measures of prevention justifies the hope of finding a specific means of prevention in the near future.
