

The Down-and-Out Brigade

"The last time for the good-time boys of twenty years ago, are the down and outers of to-day, and the idle, lazy, cigarette smoking, pool-room young men of to-day will be of the down-and-out brigade of twenty years hence." That is the statement of Dr. Conwell and that is as certain as mathematics.

No nation has a greater problem than the conservation of its raw material — YOUNG MEN. Society is concerned in this problem and the greatest influence in the world is EXAMPLE, the example of right living, of industry, thrift and saving. The things that matter are the things that pertain to the future, that makes men strong in character and purpose. SAVING with a purpose is one of the big things in life. The big asset of a state or community are the young men who are saving with purpose, preparing to take a man's part in men's affairs, and the young men who stand out are the young men with a bank account. The other kind don't emphasize purpose with thrift and saving, at least they don't have an account with the

BURROWS NATIONAL BANK
And the young man who has better credit at the saloon and pool-room than he has at the bank has enlisted already in the down-and-out brigade.

ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING

At the annual school meeting held at the school house, Tuesday evening, James P. Cannon was elected trustee in place of P. C. Lynch, who after sixteen years service on the Board thought he had earned a retirement. Mrs. Florence E. Earley was elected to succeed herself.

It was voted to raise a tax of $7,000.00 to meet current expenses of the school for the ensuing year, which is a thousand dollars more than last year.

THINK IT OVER!

MAINTAIN PRIVACY OF "DEN"

Important Part of House is That in Which One May Be Free From Intrusion.

No man or woman feels absolutely satisfied with his or her home in these days unless he or she, or both, have a "den." Therefore every architect who plans a house provides for at least one room to be used as a "den," and if possible he takes care that both Mr. and Mrs. shall have their own private "dens."

But on the word "private" the architects do not always put sufficient importance. The "den" should be in every sense of the word private, and to make it so it should be so located in the house as to be apart from and not easily entered from parlor or living room or front hall, or any other room which is in constant use.

A certain suburbanite has what he supposed was to be his "den," but one cannot enter the living room from the front hall without passing through this "den," the result is that there is absolutely no privacy in the "den," and, more than this, nine times out of ten, when his wife has callers in the evening, the "den" proves more attractive to all in the house than does the living room or the parlor, with the result that Mr. Suburbanite, if he desires a private hour for reading or writing, must hike to the kitchen or some other part of the house and leave the wife and callers in undisputed possession of what was supposed to be his own nice little private "den."

By all means have a "den," and by all means see that it is private, even if you have to build it in the cellar or out back of the house.

JUST THE MAN

"Who is that ugly woman out in the audience?"

"That is my wife, sir!"

"Here is my card, sir. I am the most successful divorce lawyer in the city."

STILL, THEY'RE ALL ALIKE.

"Do you care much for travel, Mr. Jibway?"

"That depends on the kind of people I meet."

"Some tourists are a bore, no doubt."

"I wasn't thinking of tourists. One may avoid them to a certain extent, but he is compelled to come in contact with hotel clerks, porters and bellhops."
