

Thorn With Every Rose

This old world we're livin' in is mighty hard to beat; but ain't the roses sweet? Not a rose without a thorn, and an accomplishment without effort, not a success without sacrifice. That is the philosophy Stanton sings and it is set to the music of human experience. You are pretty certain to prick both your fingers and your pride in gathering the roses of success, but "ain't the roses sweet?" The dollars are the roses of toil, of purpose and effort, and their perfume is the satisfaction in having met an obligation; the obligation of making provision for the "rainy day," for age and dependents. We want to repeat with emphasis that the wants to Get Acquainted with men and women who are scratching their fingers on the thorns gathering the roses of provision. We want to sell them of the provision we have made for the safety of the roses, how to graft, prune and transplant into larger growth! Why not come in and talk this matter over with us? Why not use the experience of expert horticulturist in the garden of finance?
