THE GIRL, A HORSE

covery. Oddly enough, the miraculous past of its the one chance in a million that I should run across the one past son in a hundred million who could tell me that particular story—didn't impress me at the time. I was too busily engaged in trying to fit the puzzle pleces together to think of anything else at the moment.

Come to sum them-up, they fitted as toundingly well: Grandfather Jasper had always been exceedingly close mouthed when speaking of his investments. Added to that, is would be the last man in the world be have confessed that he had been bitten, even indirectly, by a "gold-brick" game. Then too, the course he had pursued with the mining sugiacer (always granting the truth of Brown-beard's story) was just like him; he would have, wanted a year in which to think it over —or maybe longer. Also, it was like him to keep all the identifying marks as carefully hidden as a net meat in its shell.

At this point I hegan to think about carefully hidden as a net meet in its shell.

At this point I began to thisk about setting action. One word from Balton, or Bulledin, or whatever his asme was, would settle the identities beyond question, and that word was his "del gantiaman's" name. He hadn't men though it once in telling his yara-which might have been by design, or just a happen-so. But, by heavens, I'd make him mention it!

I happened to think of the Mining exchange, and to wonder if somebody connected with it might not have a list of engineers and mining experts. A hike through the streets brought me to the exchange and the secretary not only had such a list, but was willing to show it to me. In its proper place I found the name, "Charles Bullerton."

A query shot at the name toghind the desk elicited the information that Midesk elicited the i Charles Bullerion was in South Amer-ica. At this, I could have shouted for joy, because it proved conclusively lea. At this, count has a condition of joy, because it proved conclusively that. Charles Bull-trop was my man, and that the tale to which Thad liftered wasn't altogether had not whole cloth, as so many Pulmann martion rotanners are.

message prepared and answer procession:
"What yes the name of the old pro-tieman who bought the watered mine and then died?" An enswer to that would tell the story.

For two whole days, an interval which I spent in hither and you chast. ings of plebald ponies and hariequin-faced dogs about the streets of Denver and found no hunered star to tached to any or them—I thought I had merely shot up into the air with my telegram, and missed the whote face of the earth. Then, one morning, the answer came in just two words, like this:

"To Stanford Broughton,
"Hotel Savoy,
"Denver.
"John Smith.

"John Smith.

"CHARLES BULLERTON."

That settled it with a vengeance, yeard say. And yet it didn't. It merely preved that Mr. Charles Bullertee had acquired a sudden excess of cauties, and was probably cusains himself pleentriffly for having been too leese-tengued with a perfect stranger in a Pellman smeker. He had answered my wire with a name that meant year as much or as liste as if he'd said "Alexander the Great," and that was preceively the amount of information he had intended to centwey. Whether or not Bulletten's memonands agreement with my grandfather words he binding upon me as Grandfather words he binding upon me as Grandfather Juspee's het, was a question for the down to dedica. But one thing was sertim—that is, granting all the assumptions; it he should find the mine and go to work on his unwatering seleme, he would have a grip on things that saight be handsomely stroublesses to shake loose.

After I had argued it out thus far the next stop suggested itself in a lifty. I must have a heart-to-heart talk with the cautions Mr. Bullerton, telling him who I was, and perhaps giving him a chance to join forces with me in the search. If it, should, prove to having grandfather's mine that "CHARLES BULLERTON."

th nearly half a million—and again. And a half-million is the one particular tenterior was butting for. His name, as I recall it, was Hilton, or something like that, and he was the superintendent of a big drainage-tunnel undertaking designed to unwater a 'lot of flooded miles on the hills above the tunnel site.

"I can give you a little information, but not much," was his answer to my inquiry. "Bullerton is bughouse on the subject of a lost infine—not as unusual disease in any mining country—and he has gone to hunt for it. He has a sketch—map of the location, but nothing to tie it to. I 'dien't ask him where the location wise—or rather, where he thought it was."

"Then, of course you have no idea where his bunt was to begin?" I threw in.
