

SCHAUL & ROOSA COMPANY

INITIAL DISPLAY

OF THE NEW SPRING STYLES FOR MEN

Fitting a personality is an art. Recognizing the difference in personalities is the result of study. We've made that a very definite part of our business here and toward that end have assembled a very diversified variety of what is prescribed as correct in Men's Suits and Topcoats for Spring.

SPRING SHIRTS

Self-determination is the big thing in your selection of shirts. Styles vary from season to season in textures, patterns and colors, but after all, you do the choosing in accordance with your personal taste.

audible was still going on under the concealing mass of broken timbers and sheet-iron, there was a masterful interruption. Shots, yells, shoutings and hot curses told us that a fierce battle of some kind was being waged just outside of our wrecked fortress!

As we emerged from our wrecked fortress, other members of the posse were scattering to round up the outlying bomb-throwers, who had apparently taken to the tall timber in a panic-stricken effort to escape.

I didn't know at the time how much or how little the big marshal knew of the various and muddled involvements which were climaxing right there in the early morning sunshine on the old Cinnabar dump-head.

The look she gave me was just plain deadly; you wouldn't think that violet-blue eyes could do it, but they can. Then she drew a folded paper from somewhere inside of her clothes and held it out to me.

out and demanded our surrender I should have been tempted to tell him that I was not so much of a hog as not to know when I had enough.

The Crash Came Almost Immediately.

It may be a dastardly confession of weakness to admit it, but I am free to say that the prolonged struggle was gradually undermining my nerve.

All of this I hastily pointed out to Daddy Hiram, adding that, for Jeanie's sake, if for no better reason, he ought to take his chance of staying upon earth.

"No, sir; I done promised your grand'aw 'at I'd stand by for him, and he paid me money for doin' it. When them hellions get this here mine, they're goin' to dig a hole somewehes and bury me afterward," was all I could get out of him.

We were not given very much more time for discussion, or for anything else—the first faint-grazing dawn was coming—and with the partial lightning of the inner gloom, we craned our necks like a double-headed turtle peering out of its shell, and got a glimpse of the damage done by the initial thunderbolt.

"If it hadn't—if it had been layin' on the roof when it went off, we wouldn't be lookin' up at that hole right now, Stannie, my son. We'd be mornin' up the golden stair and a wonderin' how much farther it was to the New Jerusalem, and what kind o' harps they was goin' to give us when we got there. We sure would."

"We didn't keep our heads out very long. While we were starting up at the hole and at the patch of sky beyond it, a small dark object with a small blue comet's tail trailing behind it crossed our line of sight, and we ducked and held our breath—or at least I held mine. The crash came at me immediately, and it was followed in swift succession by a second and a third. Luckily, none of the three hit the shaft-house, nor, indeed, fell very near to it; and this uncertainty of aim told us where the attack was coming from. The bomb thunders were posted somewhere on the steep slope of the mountain above us; the slope which I have described as running up from the brink of the abrupt cliff overlooking the mine plant.

"They'll get the range, after a while," Daddy grunted. "And when all is the folks down yonder at Tropla a-dreamin' about, to let all this bangin' and whangin' go on up here without comin' up to find out what's makin' it?"

The Atropia that I remembered was so nearly moribund that I didn't wonder it wasn't making any stir in our behalf; so, when a few patterin' rifle shots which seemed to originate on the great bench below began to sift in among the bomb echoes, I took it that Bullerton had divided his force and was trying to rattle us two ways at once.

For a flitting instant it seemed as if it must drop squarely in front of the iron shield under which we were jammed—in which case even the undertaker wouldn't have been needed—not any whatsoever, as Daddy Hiram would have said. But at the critical point in his flight the hurtling thing "ticked" the top of the hoist frame and its downward course was deflected; the needed half's-breath, causing it to come down beyond the machinery, and not on our side of things.

Nevertheless, we were covering in anticipation of a blast which would most likely leave the entire machinery aggregation over bodily upon us when the explosion came.

We saw the belching column of flame and gas going skyward beyond the machinery barrier, taking a full half of the roof with it, as if the blast had come from the mouth of a gigantic cannon. We were dazed and dazed by the shock, and half choked by the fumes, but neither of us was so far gone as not to hear distinctly a prolonged and rumbling crash like the thunder of a small Niagara, coming after the smash!

"The shaft!" shrielled Daddy Hiram. In a thin, choked voice; "It went off down in the shaft! And, say!—what-all's that we're a-listenin' to now!"

If there had been a dozen of the bombs raining down I don't believe the threat of them would have kept us from bursting out of our dodge-hole to go and see what had happened in the mine shaft. But before we could determine anything more than that the mouth of the shaft was completely hidden under a mass of wreckage and that the mysterious Niagara roar dwindled somewhat, but yet hollowly
