PERIODICALLY some women open the eyes of the men around her, oftentimes to their discomfort.

A 28-year-old girl was recently elected mayor of an Ohio city of 7,000 population.

The underworld considered it a joke, and prepared for carnival of crime.

But the young mayoress appointed herself police chief, magistrate, and the whole works. Being a graduate physician, she even became health commissioner.

Then she quietly went to work, and the criminal element soon found itself pinched, and jailed, and fined without mercy.

They tried threats, and bribes, and every other method known to criminality, but without result, except to make more relentless their prosecution.

It was too much of a bad thing, and the law-breakers silently faded away.

Now the city has no underworld—is as clean as a whistle—and the little lady mayoress has a national reputation and thousands of offers of marriage.

Health is a reward which kindly nature gives when we obey her laws.

A man never fights well unless he is in dead earnest.

It is possible that the maintenance of a merchant marine may be considered by the American people as much a public duty as maintain highways and bridges.
