'FOR LOVE, NOT BY PURCHASE'

New Attitude Toward Marriage is Seen to Be Awakening Among the Women of China.

Closely related with the new home idea in China is the new idea on marriage; that is, individual choice rather than family choice; "for love, not by purchase."

Like the new home this will be a matter of slow evolution. For in China the individual is not thought of as a part of a family which is the unit, the entity and which at all costs must be preserved and perpetuated. Hence, individual desires must be subordinated to the wishes or the benefit of the family.

The practice of this principle throughout the long centuries has inscribed in Chinese a submissiveness to parents, to family, that is engulfing of personality, though it is the steel that gives strength and form to the structure of the Chinese nation. The submissiveness is more than a conscious obedience; it is involuntary surrender.

Consequently, though the new young woman may advocate the theory of personal choice in marriage, only the most radical really desire it or would dare wholly to follow it. Emma Sarsfield writes in Scribner's. In matters touching the soul centers, inheritance and tradition are always stronger than imported ideas, no matter how forcible their appeal to reason. Miss China still feels that in the matter of a "mate the parents' judgment is the better.

For Religion's Sake. The confirmation class slowly fled into the pews. Angelic little faces of erstwhile mischievous youngsters bore rapt expressions, partly due to the serious occasion and partly to fright. Little gasps of pleasure and delight were uttered by fond parents and friends.

"My dear, I thought you were a half hour too early and here they are beginning the service! Something is amiss." My curious friend sought an usher.

"Yes, madame, the bishop was kind enough to come earlier to officiate. One of the youngsters being confirmed is due at the theater by eight. She is a mermaid."

"No, I was not perplexed," she told me afterward, "but, 'The world do move.'" — Chicago Journal.

Pelican Ate Goff Ball. A pelican, one of those huge, long-beaked marine birds that pose themselves a hundred feet above the water, close their wings and with beaks open, dive head foremost into schools of small fish, finched a golf game in St. Petersburg, Fla., recently "one down." The Coffee Pot course is along the shore of Tampa bay and on the eleventh hole is a small brackish lake forming a water hazard, which must be crossed to reach the green.

One member of a foursome drove from the tee and a strong wind carried the ball into the lake. A pelican flying lazily above the lake evidently took the ball bobbing on the surface for a new variety of fish, for he suddenly closed his wings, dropped with terrific speed and gobbled it.

Victory Made a Difference. During the allied occupation of Germany, an amusing encounter took place between a British soldier and a German baroness.

The baroness, writes Miss Violet R. Markham in "Watching on the Rhine," told a British officer that one of his men insulted her. Indeed, she declared, she had never been so insulted in her life. The officer at once began inquiries and finally learned that the lady had found two British soldiers whistling and sliding down the banisters of her back stairs. She had told them sharply that whistling and sliding on the banisters were verboten. Whereupon Thomas Atkins, general and undefeated, had turned to her and remarked pleasantly, "Eye, madame, but yer should have won the war, and then yer could have come and sit down our back stairs and whistled."

Country's National Parks

There are nineteen national parks with a total area of 10,850 square miles, under the supervision of the secretary of the Interior and seven national military and other parks under the supervision of the secretary of war, and a number of other national monuments, such as the petrified forests of Arizona, etc., under the jurisdiction of the secretaries of the Interior, agriculture and war. For many years the Hot Springs Reservation of Arkansas was the only national park. In 1832 an area of 1 1/2 square miles on which are 40 hot springs posing serious curative properties was set aside as a national park. It was not until forty years later that another national park was created, the Yellowstone, in Wyoming. The other 17 have been created within forty-two years, and seven of these within the last decade, the interest in conservation probably accounting for the larger number. The only one in New England is Lafayette park in Maine, on Mount Desert.

Process of Absorption

Miss Christina Merriman, head of the disarmament division of the League of Women Voters, said at a dinner party in Washington: "Disarmament, when it comes, will do away with the absorption of one country by another.

"These absorbing, or bona constrictor, countries remind me of the elderly man in the smoker who bent over an old gentleman seated in front of him and said:

"'Beg pardon, but do you mind lending me your spectacles a moment?'" "Not at all," said the kindly old gentleman, "not at all."

"The clergy chap fixed the spectacles firmly on his nose.

"Thank you," he said. "And now, sir, since you can no longer read your newspaper, will you kindly pass it over to me?" — Washington Star.
