COULDN'T PART FROM CLOCK

Elderly Lady, Miss Charlotte Pomeroy, Had to Accompany Him on Long Visit.

After her children married and moved away, the woman reluctantly sold the house in which they had all been born and brought up, and moved into an apartment, taking for herself only her most cherished possessions. The best beloved of all her things was her grandfather's clock.

Finally her oldest daughter persuaded her to desert her apartment for a winter and come and stay with her. "I wonder that you didn't bring the grandfather's clock," her daughter said, as they drove from the station to the house. "Really, I'm surprised at you, mother."

"A flush swept up the woman's cheeks. "I did bring it," she whispered self-consciously. "I thought you wouldn't mind if I kept it in my room. It's coming on the next train — this one didn't carry freight."

For a moment the daughter looked at her in amazement; then she threw back her head and laughed.

"You really brought it?" she demanded incredulously. "I might have known! You didn't bring the sideboard or anything?"

Still blushing, the mother shook her head. "Just the clock," she said. "I — I just couldn't bear to leave it there all alone." — New York Globe.

FOUR VIEWS OF THE BIBLE

The Belief That the Scriptures are Throughout Verbally Inspired is Not Universally Held.

According to one view, held for centuries, the Scriptures are throughout verbally inspired, and every word in them dictated to the sacred writers by the spirit of God; according to another, though they are not inspired word for word, they contain a record of divine things written under divine influence; according to a third, though not written under divine inspiration in any part, they contain a faithful record of a divine progressive revelation; and according to a fourth, they contain a record merely of what a long succession of passionately devout men saw and felt to be the clear purpose of the Eternal in His providence of the world. St. John is authority for the statement that "no man hath seen God at any time"; but certain impressions or feelings are interpreted as the "presence of God," and certain states of mind and will as the "will of God." Men who believed they were thus moved upon by the divine presence and inspired to utter the divine will have given mankind a particular literature and this literature has been called the word of God. So far as our western civilization is concerned that word of God is known as the Holy Bible.

Don't Burn Your Shoes.
"People persist in burning their shoes," said the cobbler, according to the Book and Shoe Recorder. "It don't see how it is. I keep telling them not to put their wet shoes on the steam radiator or on the kitchen stove to dry. But they keep on doing it. So the leather gets burned, and I get a lot of shoes with charred soles to mend."

"Of course, the shoes do not burn to ashes. If they did, then the wasteful habit might be ended, for people would plainly see for themselves that their shoes get burned when put on the stove or radiator. The soles, in the heat, just crisp, something like a piece of bacon, and when worn they crumble away. So I get a lot of shoes to be mended."

"Of course, it helps my business some. But I wish people wouldn't do it because it is wasteful. And waste, you know, is the great American habit that keeps the cost of living high."

Origin of Flavors.
Among the most remarkable glimpses into hidden corners of nature that scientific advance has afforded are the frequent discoveries of micro-organisms in unexpected places, where they produce phenomena heretofore supposed to rise from other causes. For instance, a scientist in Upsala, Sweden, ascertained that in preparations of meat and fish containing, for purpose of preservation, salt to the amount of 15 per cent, micro-organisms grow luxuriantly, and he concludes that the flavors and odors that are peculiar to various salt conserves are due to the micro-organisms with which they are crowded.—Exchange.

See Geographical Change.
A variety of corn grains was found in the mortuary urns of prehistoric graves, unearthed in Tennessee. The only other cereal of its kind occurs in the West Indies. This is taken by the bureau of ethnology as proof of intercommunication between the ancient peoples of North America and those islands. It is not evidence that within the time of man the West Indies were a continuous part of the North American mainland. As the locality in which these graves have been found becomes more fully searched, it is possible that other sustaining evidence in this connection will be found.—Scientific American.

Falsifying Food.
"Do you believe," the witness of the plain people of Italy is asked, "that the Pope is a liar?" replied Squisato Basso. "If my strength is to be divided, I will give it to the Pope." — Exchange.
