SAYS WEATHER FORECASTS SAVED FARMERS $25,000

Reports Relayed to Farmers by Telephone Enabled Them to Avoid "Catchy" Weather During Haying

Government weather forecasts saved Orange County farmers approximately $25,000 this year in hay they were able to cure without wetting, and this amount is a fair estimate of the value of the service to every county that had it this year, was brought out in a discussion of the subject held at the State College of Agriculture at Ithaca during the annual conference of the state extension forces.

County Agent Greene, of Orange County, reported that in his county the telephone calls to the Farm Bureau office from farmers inquiring about the weather averaged 49 a day from June thru August, a total of more than 3,000 calls during the three months' forecasting period. The government forecast was also printed daily in three afternoon newspapers. Orange County farmers estimate that 5,000 tons of hay were gathered using the weather forecast as a basis so that all was gathered and cured without rain. Placing an extra value of $5 a ton on clean, bright hay above that of water soaked hay, this means a saving of $25,000 on hay alone in this particular county.

Starting in 1921 as an experiment, the weather forecasts attracted little attention because the period covered by the forecast was short and weather conditions exceptionally favorable. Last summer the plan was developed so that daily weather reports covering three days in advance were sent to various Farm Bureau offices from the Syracuse station of the Weather Bureau. The discussion brought out the fact that farmers who had received the service this year objected strongly when it was discontinued at the end of August. The fact that the forecaster knew not only the weather but the agriculture of the state made the forecast both accurate and valuable.

The farm home without its own sewage disposal system will soon be as out of date as the Dodo bird. Its not as hard to install a system as some think. The State College of Agriculture at Ithaca has a free bulletin telling all about it. Ask for E. 48.

CUT OVER WOODLOT TO MAKE IT BETTER

Taking Out Least Desirable Varieties and Defective Trees First Will Increase Value in After Years

The owner of a farm woodlot who is looking to the future as well as to the present will prefer what is known as "an improvement cutting" to a less systematic harvesting of his timber crop, Cornell forestry specialists declare. They say that it will pay the farmer to leave standing a considerable percentage of those kinds of trees which he wants to encourage in his woodlot. These trees will seed the soil and fill up the gaps left by the cutting.

All logging operations should be made with the preservation and extension of the stand of young growth in mind.

It is considered a good practice at the first cutting to remove trees like the chestnut, aspen, ironwood, and beech, since they are considered less desirable and satisfactory in New York woodlots.

Stag-headed, butt-injured and heavy foliaged, limby tree of every variety may likewise be disposed of at the first cutting.

White pine, white ash, basswood, red oak, hard maple, tulip popular, and in some cases even hemlock should be encouraged.

A special warning is given against making the first cutting too heavy. It is said to be better to make this first cutting most carefully, and if desirable to go over the woodlot again in five or ten years. If the first cutting is too heavy, it may result in a tangle of brambles which will retard all development.

Dairy improvement association records show that the feed cost of 100 pounds of milk varies from 40 cents to $1.30, depending largely on the production of the herd.

Don't think of selling any timber from your woodlot until you have read the Cornell bulletin about estimating its value; otherwise a slick buyer may skin you. A postcard to the College of Agriculture at Ithaca, bearing your name and the symbol E. 49, will bring it.

Money which furnishes feed for good cows is invested, not spent, says one good farmer who gets liberal returns in the form of increased production.

Too much care can't be taken in making trees in setting out an orchard. Time spent on this will save a lot more time later on.

The fewer tanks done in the kitchen, except cooking, the easier it is for the one who cooks. The laundry should be a separate room, if possible.

Your labor-saving devices should save your time, not for more labor, but for rest and happy recreation.

I value this delicious home-feeling as one of the choicest gifts parent can bestow. Washington Irving.

Did You Ever Think of This

That, — there are many unseen elements involved in every purchase, and that it is safer to buy where everything is built up to the standard of quality, and not down to a competitive price — to buy at a store where the name of material is never misrepresented, and ridiculous price comparisons quoted — that is safer to buy where an honest dollars worth is given for every dollar you pay, than to question your intelligence by saying that it is worth several times the price — it can't be done — it isn't done — except in advertising.

For 38 years the name ERLICH has stood for the best quality, fairly priced, honestly advertised, and no matter how large or how small the purchase, a guarantee for a full measure of satisfaction goes with it.

Thanksgiving Means Something

Next week comes the finest of our national holidays. Thanksgiving—well, it means something this year. Bumper crops have been harvested, mills and factories are busy, prosperity has winged its way back after the lean years of depression.

The spirit of Thanksgiving is well reflected in the stores of Hornell. Here shelves and counters are heaped high with the finest merchandise that the world affords. But it is merchandise again priced within the reach of all. High prices, made necessary by war times, have vanished. A dollar buys as much as two dollars did during those days.

Now is the time to brighten the home for the Thanksgiving feast and to provide warm, serviceable, stylish clothing for all members of the family. It is easy to make this an especially happy Thanksgiving for all the folks.

Bring them to Hornell. Let them do their shopping in the big, bright, pleasant stores of Steuben County's most progressive city. It will be a happy day for all.

Hornell merchants will be glad to see you. They will accord you fair treatment, sell you the best goods and stand back of every sale.

"The Public Be Pleased" is the motto of Hornell merchants. They want your business on that basis.

Come to Hornell and spend a happy day.
