Spends $2000 to see Football Game

Mrs. D. H. Richardson, 55, of Davenport, Ia., spent $2,000 to see a football game and "it was worth it," she says. She chartered a special car and took 25 relatives from Iowa to New Haven, Conn., to see their team beat Yale, 6-0. Mrs. Richardson happy and confident that her "Hawkeye Boys" are going to be declared the national champions this year, posed for this picture as her "special" started its triumphant return from the Yale Bowl.

Three courses are open to the small merchant; to advertise in the best local newspaper so aggressively, so interestingly, that his little store will grow big; to confine advertising to the too-usual "schemes," and thus to remain little with ever-diminishing chances of survival; or to fail to advertise at all, and thus fail entirely to build up a permanent store.

Dairy farmers may want to know more about cream separation. Cornell has a bulletin on it, which will come to you in response to a post-card asking for E-51, addressed to the College of Agriculture at Ithaca.

ZOOLOGISTS, who, in simpler language, are the bug-ologists, after microscopically observing the habits and conduct of ants for years, bring us the interesting information that these busy little workers in the humbler world are by their own voluntary action, the most intelligent of all living creatures. They are trying to describe its existence by a kind of homology with human life. Busy as are these minute little creatures, their nests are scrupulously clean. Several times each day they better their appearance with combs and brushes. The mothers are the only ones that are allowed to eat all they want. All others, by their established law, must abstain from over eating and drinking. Soldier ants protect both the young and those who care for the young. The mother ant is treated with all the deference of an empress. The ants limit their sleep to just that which is their need of rest and they destroy the drone and all those who would attempt to over-indulge in leisure or luxury. They have architects and engineers. They build houses and bridges to conform with definite plans. They have their agriculture and horticulture and have been observed to domesticate as many as 584 different kinds of creatures. Wonderful is the story of the ant. Some of our scientists who are better zoologists than sociologists, quote the old Hebrew saying of thousands of years ago, "Go to the ant, thou squalid, consider her way," and suggest that there is much in the ant the man might well try to emulate. Other scientists tell us to consider the elephant.

The Hindoo tells us that he gets good work from that giant creature only so long as he is good to it. Should he abuse or offend it, he would lose the elephant's willingness to work and he might lose his life by incurring the elephant's ire. To appease the elephant the Hindoo always feeds it before he himself partakes of food.

That gentleness and generosity do much to gain good work is the moral lesson that scientist hands us as the result of these observations.

But who wants to be either an elephant or an ant? Who would want to emulate their ways, interesting and perhaps intellectual as they appear to be?

The elephant has none of the generosity for which the scientist observer pleads. The elephant says, "Feed me first or I am likely to get mad and kick the daylight out of you." There is nothing in that sort of a spirit worth emulating.

The ant is good to its own but it wars on every other creature that it cannot subdue and use. There is nothing so very big and magnanimous about that. What is more, outside of the grotesque trick elephants in the circus ring, no scientist has ever called upon us to see or hear an animal symphony, nor have they shown us an animal-made picture, or gracefully formed statue. Has any one ever yet seen an elephant pause in rapture before a gorgeous sunset?

What eye at the microscope has ever seen an ant lay down its work upon its hill to hark to the song of the lark?

Whatever are man's imperfections he is not only the research student; the truth seeker, but what is finer, he is the great appreciator. To be able to appreciate the wonders of the world—that in itself is living the higher life.

PROFITEERING

We are told that we are facing a coal shortage.

But the shortage of coal is not a reason for the increase of the price of coal. To increase the price of coal would make it possible for the rich to have coal, but it would make it impossible for the poor to purchase it.

This country needs so many tons of coal. The rich and the poor alike need the coal. The shortage of coal should not cause the price to be increased. An increased price will prevent a just distribution of coal.

The only legal and just thing that can possibly be done is to distribute the amount of coal we have among all the people at the same rate that they would have been charged for the coal had there been a sufficient quantity.

The profiteer who takes advantage of the situation and raises the price of coal is an enemy of the people.

Rev. M. Matthews

molested and has escaped the judgments of law. But now the people are growing weary, restless, and revengeful.

The time has come for the government to arrest every man who takes advantage of an emergency to practise extortion.

This is certainly true of the hour in which we are now living.

The government talked about seizing the coal mines. The government ought to seize not only the mines, but everything else that the profiteer is trying to use for the purpose of extorting from the people an unjust and unreasonable profit.

The profiteer should not be allowed to do business.

Let the government say to all profiteers: "Every time you raise the price unjustly, the government will take from you the right and the license to do business."

This is the only way by which the suffering public can be quieted and put at ease. This is the way by which the government can restore confidence in its sovereignty, in its power, and in its justice.
