WAY TO TEST YOUR RUBIES

All Genuine Stones Contain Tiny Flaws and Characteristic Peculiarities.
 After the diamond the ruby stands supreme among precious stones, being the most popular of all colored gems. The genuine stone is obtained from a mineral called corundum.
 To obtain one ruby thousands of tons of soil have to be washed and carefully examined. The finest gems come from the great ruby mines of Burma.
 All genuine stones contain certain tiny flaws and blemishes and characteristic peculiarities. Spurious rubies get their imperfections during manufacture; and as chemists are more careful than nature, these imperfections are less noticeable.
 You can test your rubies by certain differences between the real and the artificial. A genuine ruby contains irregularly shaped bubbles; the imitation gem contains bubbles which are perfectly round. Again, natural rubies have a silky sheen due to a number of tiny parallel lines running in three directions. Imitation stones never have this characteristic.
 To examine your ruby, place it in a strong light and look at it through a microscope. If the stone is in a setting, place a drop of oil on its face, and hold it up with the back face to the light. The drop of oil prevents reflections of light which would confuse the eye.

Her Version of Concert.
 A little girl to whom the wonders of evening dress were quite unknown was taken to her first evening concert. On her return home she was asked what the concert was like.
 "Oh," she said, "it was very funny. There was a lady screaming because she had lost her sleeves and a waiter played on the piano all the time."
